Penn Manor Hosts State Ag Teachers

ANDY ANDREWS

MILLERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Dr. Blannie Bowen, head of the Agriculture and Extension Education Department in Penn State's College of Agriculture, told a group of agriculture teachers Wednesday night that the department will be "very aggressive well into the next century."

Bowen's speech to the more than 100 teachers from around the state in the Penn Manor High School Library capped a four-day conference, the Professional Technical Institute for Agricultural Educators sponsored by the Pennsylvania Vocational Agriculture Teacher's Association (PVATA).

Through improved faculty development and retooling programs where necessary, according to Bowen, work can be done to provide better teachers. Where Penn State is ranked by some as in the top two or three of all educational schools in the country, Bowen said his goal is to provide "the best ag education program in the country."

The four-day state program at the host school, Penn Manor, allowed ag educational professionals to tour other schools that have renovated and expanded their agriculture instruction facilities.

Included were tours of Solanco High School, remodeled during the 1997-1998 school year.

Solanco features a technology classroom and a newly designed mechanics lab with materials handling and storage.

Another school tour of Manheim Central featured renovations that were completed in 1997. New additions at Manheim include an expanded welding facility, two classrooms, and a horticulture area.

The host school for the conference, Penn Manor, completed renovations this year. The school includes new classrooms, a green-

Berks County Dairy Adds New Level To Milking System

SHARTELSVILLE (Berks Co.) — Even the dogs had name tags at a recent open house in Berks County of the Skyline Acres dairy facilities.

Members of the family, and the various business representatives all wore name tags, and, according to the family, why not the dogs?

A roughly estimated one thousand visitors toured new facilities for housing and milking 450 cows, owned by the two-family dairy farming operation of John and Donna Hix, and Terry and Kim Hix.

There were visitors from at least three states, according to car license plates.

While the new facilities went into use in December, it was only more recently that some of the finishing touches were done in order to have a proper public showing.

The open house experience can be priceless for the education and insight gained.

This open house was no exception.

However, there were several things different about this open house.

While there are a variety of dairy setups in Pennsylvania — everything from very old, thick-walled bank barns; to low-ceilinged tie-stall barns with tunnel ventilation; to the newer open ridged, open-walled post and beam barns — the Hixes' setup is especially unique because it was built to maximize the use of natural ventilation, to easily increase capacity to double the herd size, because aesthetics were given a high priori-

Governor's School Is 'Life-Changing Event'

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania Governor's School for the Agricultural Sciences "has been documented as a life-changing event for students in powerful, positive ways," said Dr. Marianne L. Fivek.

Fivek, director of the school, recently spoke about the goals of the program, which has been underway since June 28 at Penn State and continues until Aug. 1.

Importantly, according to Fivek, an additional "impact" study will be completed next year to show the scope of the school on the lives of graduates. The study

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers sold 1.00-2.00 lower. Slaughter heifers were 1.00 lower in a very light test. The week after July 4th is typically a poor one for the beef business. This week was no exception and the movement of boneless beef was especially light. By Friday morning, Western feedlots had still failed to move the bulk of this week's showlist with only a few sales at mostly 61.00. Local Holstein steer prices closed 1.00 lower, after holding steady until late in the week. The slaughter cow market was steady to 1.00 lower and slaughter bulls ended mostly 1.00 lower. This week's supply included 54 percent

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE:

Prices were unchanged to lower for mediums in the Northeast and Midwest, unchanged on the balance. The market tone was steady to instances weak with the light sizes in the weakest position. Demand was light to instances good, mostly moderate with food service and features best. Supplies were at least adequate or available, except jumbos and extra large remained occasionally tight. Breaking stock supplies were adequate to ample for the light demand. Light type hen offerings were sufficient for full slaughter schedules.

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS - PART I FEDERAL-STATE

Trucklot buying interest varied according to end users needs. Offerings were confidently held with the best movement noted in other than regular channels. Promotional interest centered on attractively priced red meat items. Movement was best into fast food outlets as widespread media ads stimulated consumer buying interest. Retail demand was very light with several distributors showing hardly any interest in high priced poultry items. The market tone was fully steady to firm as influence from other aspects of the market continued to clear most available product.

PRICES PAID PER POUND, ICE PACKED AND CO2 PACKED BROILER/FRYER PARTS, DELIVERED TO FIRST RECEIVERS IN POOL TRUCKLOT AND TRUCKLOT QUANTITIES.

ATLANTA, GA.
JULY 09, 1998

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained seasonally good and was sufficient to keep the bulk of offerings in good balance. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights varied, but were generally desirable. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were 1 cent higher at 66 to 80 cents. Trade sentiment was fully steady to firm. In the parts complex, offerings were adequate to closely cleared. Bone-in breasts were in tightest supply.

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Harvest pressure, good yields, and lack of export sales, weighed on wheat bids today. Corn and soybean bids continued higher on hot, dry weather predictions for the Midwest. Wheat mostly 1 to 3 cents lower. Corn 1 to 4 cents higher. Sorghum 5 cents higher. Soybeans 3 to 9 cents higher. Wheat harvest is moving rapidly northward with good yields reported. Bids were slightly lower as export demand this week remains slow. Very good export sales of corn over the past couple of days but not for soybeans. Forecasts are still calling for hot, dry conditions to move into the Midwest.

Make the R/W Connection

936 Links Ave, Landisville Pa 717-898-5257

The old wall is gone with my new Makita 12" gas saw. It was only $675.00. Blades were $2.95ea and got a 48" X 100' roll of orange safety fence for $41.95.

We emptied water from the silage pit with a new 2" submersible trash pump. Can you believe $249.95. Also picked up 2" x 50' blue layflat with fittings for only $29.95. Sure beat the tractor store price!!

Would you believe they make band saw blades on the spot?

They stock Milwaukee, Dewalt, Jet, Metabo, IR, Jet and ARO power and air tools.

R/W Connection has the hand and power tools you need at the price you deserve. Our factory trained service department repairs all brands of power tools so.. Call us and to make the R/W Connection.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

ST. SWITHIN, JULY 15.

BASTILLE DAY

July 14 marks the national holiday of the republic of France, something like our Independence Day. In 1789, a mob of Parisians stormed the fortress prison Bastille in Paris, looking to capture ammunitions stored there. The prison, which had once housed the Man with the Iron Mask and Voltaire, had no political prisoners at that time, although there were seven inmates who gained their freedom that day. The event was symbolic in the French Revolution, however, and led the way for further rebellions.

Inferiors revolt in order that they may be equal, and equals that they may be superior.

– Anstotle

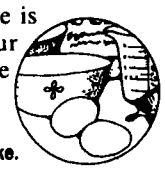
TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Line refrigerator crisper drawers with waxed paper for easier cleaning.

MOCHA CAKE

1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
1/2 cup sugar
2 large eggs
6 tablespoons flour
7 tablespoons cornstarch
1-1/2 tablespoons powdered instant coffee
2 tablespoons brewed coffee
Glaze:
2 ounces sweet chocolate
2 tablespoons brewed coffee

With an electric mixer, cream butter and sugar, then beat in eggs Sift together dry ingredients and stir into the butter mixture. Add brewed coffee and mix. Bake in a greased and floured 8-inch square pan for 30 minutes at 350° F. While cake is cooling, heat chocolate and coffee for glaze in a double boiler. When cake is cool, pour warm glaze over cake.



Makes 1 8-inch cake.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If the three days previous to St. Jacob's (July 20) are clear, then the rye will be good.

If on Friday it rain, 'twill on Sunday again.

If Friday be clear, have on Sunday no fear.

Midsummer rain spoils wine, stock, and grain.

As July, so the next January.

OPINION

Increase Bulk Tank Milk Prices

Since January, 1998, wholesale prices of butter have taken a dramatic increase from $1.12 per pound to $1.98 per pound, according to charts released this week by the Progressive Agriculture Organization, headquartered in Meshoppen.

Naturally, the retail price has increased at the wholesale level.

Of course, many consumers believe dairy farmers are really making a big profit on these butter prices. But actually, there is no direct relationship between the price of manufactured dairy products and the dairy farmer's price.

Different economists will disagree as to why the butter and cheese wholesale prices have sky-rocketed, but one thing is sure, the value of milk at the farm level is not responsible.

"Consumers should realize that dairy producers will only receive a small amount of the current price increases, because butterfat accounts for only about 3.6 percent of the total makeup of milk," said Rodger Scholttach, director of National Farmers Organization, Ames, Iowa. "The current butterfat product pricing situation is certainly seasonal and is based somewhat on consumption forecasts."

The good side of all this discussion is that butter is now considered a healthy food that consumers are willing to pay more to get. And with July 5th a new basic formula price to be announced, the higher consumer prices will finally increase bulk tank prices to some extent. Now if we can just find a way to continue to bring extra consumer dollars back to the dairy farmer we will have added hope for the future of the dairy industry.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Develop Nutrient Management Plans

October 1, 1998 is rapidly approaching. This is the date all farms with more than 2 animal units per acre (concentrated animal operations) must have their nutrient management plans filed with their county conservation district

An animal unit is 1,000 pounds of live animal weight Based on recent reports from conservation districts, the number of nutrient management plans filed thus far is very low It is very important to have all concentrated animal operations file nutrient management plans with their conservation districts.

If farmers do not voluntarily file their plans, agriculture weakens its position as being a good environmental steward. This will lead to more restrictive regulations for farmers. How farms will be regulated in the future will hinge greatly on how farmers respond now. If you have developed your nutrient management plan, file it now If you have not develop your plan, begin the process now so you may meet the October 1 deadline

If you have any questions, contact your county cooperative extension office or county conservation district office

To Understand Leafhopper Damage

Potato leafhoppers have been reported feeding on alfalfa in Lancaster County, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent. Each year these small green insects reach Lancaster County from southern stroms. Once established in an alfalfa field, their population may increase rapidly Feeding damage is caused by both the adult hopper and nymph.

The first visual sign of damage is often a yellowing of the alfalfa leaf, especially on new growth. The brassy yellowing often occurs in a v shaped wedge. Often by the time the yellowing is noticed, significant losses have already occurred. Severe damage causes stunted plants with shorten internodes. Stunting and leaf loss results in the loss of quantity and quality of hay. In addition, severe feeding reduces plant vigor and winter hardiness. Stunted alfalfa allows light penetration into the canopy, encouraging weed growth.

To Scout For Leafhoppers

As alfalfa is cut, the leafhopper will move to adjoining fields Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, recommends the regrowth of subsequent cuttings must be scouted carefully.

Considerable damage may be caused by large populations moving from a cut field to the new growth of an adjacent field. Fields should be scouted every 5 to 7 days. Begin checking new growth immediately after harvest.

Using a sweep net, take 20 sweeps in five different areas of each field. Average the number of hoppers and nymphs per sweep For hay less than 10 inches tall, consider an insecticide application if more than 0.1 hopper is found per sweep. If hay is over 10 inches tall, consider an insecticide application if 2 or more hoppers are found per sweep.

WISE UP!

July 12, 1998

Background Scripture:
Proverbs 2:1-15
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 53:106

Children are often confused about the words they hear in church. As a boy, I thought the words in the Apostles' Creed meant that Jesus was coming to "quicken" the dead. So I do not find it hard to believe a colleague of mine who said that in his younger years he always thought the hymn was "Wise Up, O Men of God."

Every time I sing that hymn I think of that alternate wording and contemplate that many times in our lives it would be quite relevant. Men and women of God often need to "wise up" as well as "rise up." In fact, there is some danger in "rising up" before we "wise up."

Many years ago when I first read Proverbs 3, I intended to take it with a grain of salt. I had observed that obeying God does not always keep us from misfortune or hardship. Sometimes good people suffer and bad people even prosper. So, when I read, "My son, do not forget my teaching, but let your heart keep my commandments; for length of days and years of life and abundant welfare will they give you" (3:1,2), I tended to be a bit cynical.

FAITH & HEALTH

For the past 35 years I studied and taught the relationships between health and religion. In the beginning of that quest we suspected that one's spirituality had a significant effect upon healing and health. As time went on, we found that there was good evidence to believe what we formerly had suspected.

Today, physicians such as Larry LeShan, Deepak Chopra, Bernie Siegel, Andrew Weil, Carl Simonton and Herbert Benson attest to the healing power of faith. Dr. Larry Dossey, citing hundreds of clinical studies, has written several books on the power of prayer to heal.

Just recentlky, I read that more than 250 studies show that religious people are generally significantly healthier than those who are not. They get sick less frequently, do not remain sick as long, have fewer side effects, heal faster and live longer. Now do not misunderstand: the findings guarantee nothing, except that the percentages are more favorable with religious people when it comes to health.

BETTER PERCENTAGES

This too, is what Proverbs is saying: in general, the percentages for healthier, happier living are with those who live by the wisdom of God. The sage outlines some of those side benefits: "for length of days and years of life and abundant welfare will they give you" (3:2), and "it will be healing to your flesh and refreshment to your bones" (3:8). But the sage also recognizes that even the wise man will sometimes suffer and he regards these experiences as "the Lord's discipline, for the Lord reproves him whom he loves, as a father the son in whom he delights" (3:11,12).

Something else the sage says strikes a chord with my own experience: "Let not loyalty and faithfulness forsake you; bind them about your neck, write them on the tablet of your heart" (3:3). I used to think that his advice was purely symbolic. But there have been times in my life when I knew the answer to my current problem, but forgot the answers as soon as I arose from prayer. I found that one way to keep these answers in my mind was to write them on pieces of paper to position at various places in my house and office: my shaving mirror, pillow, briefcase, desk, and so forth. Constantly reminded by these visual cues, I kept them more prominently in my consciousness — like the one that still graces my desk: "I am called, not to be successful in my ministry, but to be faithful in my witness. That will be success enough."

I have experienced for myself the truth of the sage: "Happy is the man who finds wisdom, and the man who gets understanding, for the gain from it is better than gain from silver and its profit better than gold" (3:13,14).

Renovations on those schools were profiled in the June 14, 1997 issue of Lancaster Farming.

Included during the conference were tours of several facilities, including Star Roses, Hostetter Management Company, Turkey Hill Dairy Farm, New Holland, Herr's Potato Chips, Lancaster County Winery, Longwood Gardens, and Pennfield Feed Mill.

On Monday, a new and beginning teacher workshop was held.

Various projects and technical updates were scheduled for Tuesday, including pet production projects, topiary or bonsai projects, using the Ag Ed Network, a year-end business analysis, chain saw use, container gardening, mechanics of hydraulics, teaching with the Net, and others.

Tours of Longwood Gardens and New Bolton Center were also conducted.

Wednesday featured a program on issues in ag education and a PVATA business session. Other updates were presented, including presenting with PowerPoint software, a winning landscape design, welding workshop, the Envirothon Challenge, and a livestock reproduction clinic.

Wednesday highlighted the PVATA Awards Banquet at Penn Manor. Several awards were presented, including:

- Retiree recognition. Two were

Schnecksville Community Fair Photos

Stacy Dietrich, Germansville, showed the 4-H market hog champion. Judge for this show was Henry Gruber.

The Schnecksville Community Fair was held on June 22-27 at the fire company grounds in Schnecksville, Lehigh County. Final tabulation on attendance showed a two percent increase over last year. The pay-one price gate admission included unlimited rides and was very well received by the many families that attended the fair. The pictures really tell the story of the fair.

While this composite of two photographs doesn't match up exactly, it gives an idea of the features of the Skyline Acres dairy facility. Notice the 14-foot sidewalls with curtains. The front walls are also 14 feet high, but the curtain drop from the top. In front of the end curtains, in front of each support post, are pipes that serve to prevent the end walls from excessive flapping in the wind, reducing wear and tear and noise. The automatic Houle floor scaper system cleans the freestall floor every four hours. The manure is gravity fed to a lagoon. Siting the facility on top of a fairly treeless hilltop ridge allows maximum use of natural ventilation, as well as great liquid flow control — storm water can be diverted away easily and manure doesn't need to be pumped as hard or as much as some operations with level or elevated manure storage facilities. On the far left is the entrance to the dairy facility, which requires biosecurity measures, mainly disposable vinyl boots, for guests and visitors. Someone milking in the parlor can be seen from the parking lot in front of the entrance by looking through the double glass doors and through the lobby. Feed bins, bunker silos and feed mixer are located about a couple of hundred yards away from the freestall and milking parlor, down the hill in the valley at the older dairy barn where John Hix lives with his family in the two-family dairy operation. The feed is mixed and loaded and then hauled up to the freestall for drive through feeding.

ty, operator comfort was considered equally with cow comfort, and also because it was designed to provide opportunities for the children of the two couples.

With 800 acres of cropland, Skyline Acres concentrates on quality milk production. They sell to Clover Farms Dairy Company in Reading.

The herd is not the largest in the state, but the current 450-head herd represents more than a doubling of the herd the families had been milking.

Such a jump in size is something that was considered carefully, according to John Hix.

He said he was aware from his experiences and those of others that as good as the job opportunities are with such a business expansion, the risks are great.

The future of the children was considered as a major reason for expansion, Hix said.

"The opportunity is here for them," he said, but quickly added that whether the children take those opportunities, "You can't plan that."

Employed at the farm are John and Donna's three children Jennifer, 24, Michael, 23, and Mark, 18; and coming up are Terry and Kim's children, Derrick, 17, and Laura, 15.

The farming acreage is on the rolling hills just east of the village of Shartelsville. It is characteristic western Berks County, kind of a hill-and-dale geography.

According to John, the work responsibilities are fairly well divided.

His brother Terry does all the herd work, breeding, and herd management. John does the crop work.

Terry's wife takes care of young calves, John's daughter Jennifer takes care of the dry cows and vaccinations. His son Mark feeds young stock among other things, while Michael, a recent college graduate, does rations and just about all the feeding, working with a nutritionist.

"Everybody pretty well has their jobs," John said, "something they do that no one else has to bother with."

The basic outline of the new dairy facility is a 450-freestall barn with 14-foot high curtained sidewalls and end walls, a 10- to 12-foot alley way for cows going to the parlor via a breezeway, with a three-foot wide single return alley with an automatic sorter gate.

The parlor is actually a double-18 rapid release parallel Surge setup currently being used as a double-12.

The quick release parlor is unique in the area mainly for two reasons: it features a single alley cow return, with a crossover bridge so one side can cross over to the other side and exit through one alley; and it is called a "subway" parlor.

The parlor is called a subway system because it has a third, lower floor beneath the pit floor. It has three levels — one for the cows, one for the milkers, and one for the meters.

It is also unique because the milking floor of the parlor has been outfitted to be adjustable to the height of the milker.

It has been outfitted with six air bags beneath a 3,000-pound frame and vinyl finished floor cap.

The parlor is not much different from other computerized parlors outfitted with meters, except, instead of having all the meters located immediately next in line to the milking claws, the vacuum pipeline extends from the milkers down through the parlor floor to a "basement" room where the meters are in line, and electronic data is automatically available to the main farm computer.

The farm can generate its own production charts and graphs.

It can't do individual somatic cell testing, and though the Hixes have dropped using official dairy herd improvement testing, they may pick it up again for certain functions. John said there's just been too much other activity occupying their minds and time to be able to concentrate on some of those other details.

The Hix's have been progressive dairy farmers.

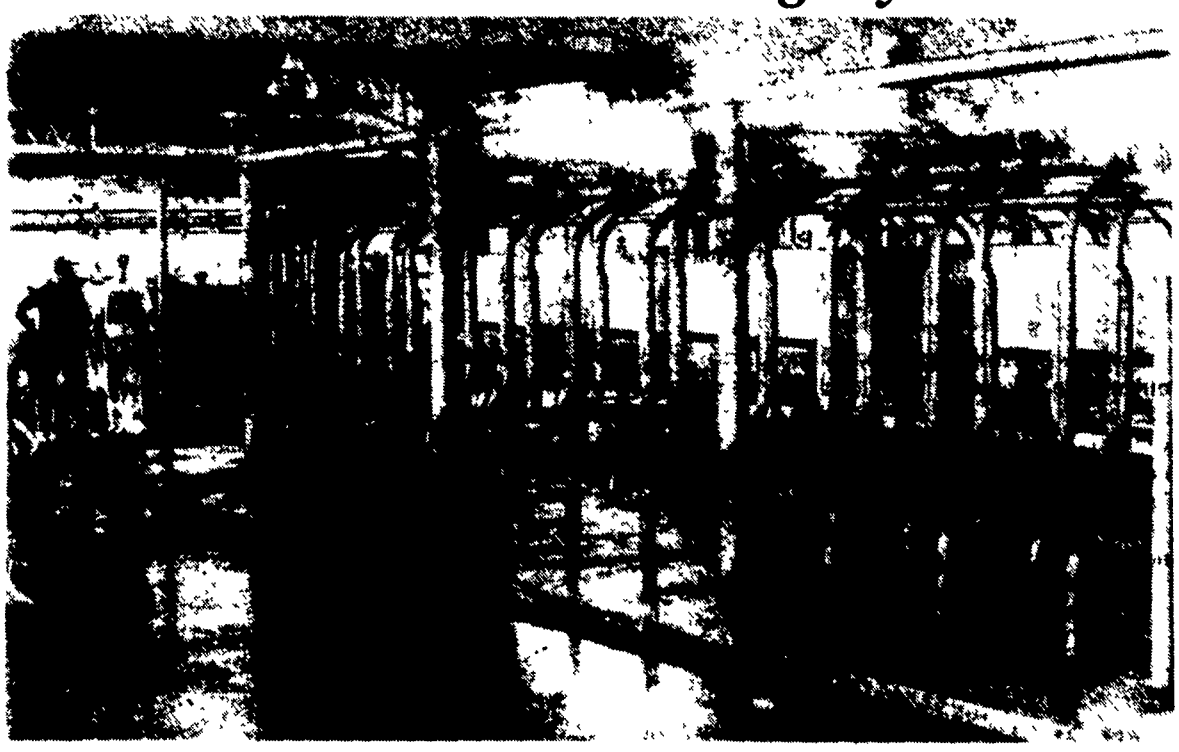
(Turn to Page A27)



This is the cow floor in the milking parlor, one side of the double-18 parallel parlor that is outfitted with 12 milking systems. The additional capacity can be used in case the decision is made to expand the herd.

This is the subway, showing one wall of the milk weight testers. The information is computerized and automatically linked to the cow so that the operator can know each cows daily output and know immediately if there is a significant change, which could indicate a health problem. The subway allows this part of the milking system to be isolated from the milking floor, and its normal mess and moisture. That minimizes the amount of cleaning of equipment after each milking, which theoretically should reduce milking time, as well as tasks.

dairy barn," John said.

That farm had 83 acres, was a single family operation with a 32-stanchion bank barn.

In 1967 he built a 110-stall freestall barn and a single-six side opening Surge milking parlor.

John said there is a coincidence between the dates when his father started milking in the then-advanced dairy setup and the start-up date of the family's newest setup.

"We started the new parlor within five days of 30 years when dad starting milking parlor. I think he started on Dec. 10, and we started Dec. 15.

"In 1967, it was the oddball (dairy farm). More or less, this one is now," he said.

The decision to build a new barn and parlor actually began about 10 years ago, John said.

"It really goes back to 1987. We remodeled the milking parlor down on the home farm, that single-row six (parlor) we made into a double-4 side opening in 1987, and the plan was to use it until we built a new facility.

He said the double-4 was equipped with automatic takeoffs and was designed for one person in the parlor. The plan was to use it for five years and build a new parlor.

"Then in the early 1990s, we started taking tours of different milking places, mostly in New York, and that was our first eye-opening experience to see what was being built in the 1990s.

"We came home realizing we didn't want to build a new parlor where we were at," Johns said. "You don't realize how bad or good it is at home until you go somewhere else."

He said that started them to really take in tours of other facilities, and going to open houses to see what people were building and how they were being built.

The existing facility is its own creation, an amalgam from meshing the envisionments of John and equipment and builder representatives.

"I always tell people, between what the equipment dealer and I envisioned, this is not the same

The outside facing stalls allow especially good ventilation for cows lying down chewing cud and making milk. Studies have shown that cows make more milk lying down than standing up. Between the cows and outside is a wide board and high tensile fencing. Plastic bird mesh is kept on the outside of the framework, but underneath the curtain. The dividers allow plenty of head room for cows to get up easily. The cow mattresses are covered with dried saw dust.

This is the milking floor of the parlor with the claws and automatic takeoffs. The floor is actually suspended on six air bags, each with a 10,000 pound capacity. The vinyl covering is over a metal frame to which railroad rails were added to increase floor weight for better stability on the air bags. The floor is adustable to accommodate the height and reach of the milker. From its lowest position, it can move up about 11 inches.

ENB has been a part of Ephrata since 1881. This building at 110 East Main Street was the Bank's home from 1884 until 1925

My calendar has 365 days

The Ephrata National Bank has been providing loans and other banking services to farmers since 1881. Many of the philosophies that helped ENB enjoy more than a century of growth are as important today as they ever were Take the way we calculate interest on loans. The traditional way to calculate interest on a loan is to use the number of days in a year, which on my calendar is 365. Many, if not most, lenders use a 360-day year.

What does that mean to you? Well, on a $100,000 loan at 81/2% (the current prime rate), your interest bill at ENB would be $8,500. If you paid interest on the basis of a 360-day year, your loan would cost you $8,618, or an annual difference of $118.

If you prefer the traditional way we calculate interest, give me a call. We've got lots to talk about.

The remarkable new Millcreek Row Mulcher automates application of mulch and compost to any row crop.

Apply compost and organic mulch to any row crop automatically

The versatile Millcreek Row Mulcher makes different sized mulch beds as you need, from 18" to 48" wide, from 1/2" to 10" deep. A mulching program can help you produce a healthier crop while reducing pesticide requirements

From tree fruit to vegetable beds, from bramble crops to vineyards, organic mulch and compost can reduce chemical input for weed suppression, retain soil moisture, and improve soil fertility by adding organic matter to sandy and clay soils

Now Millcreek eliminates the costly labor needed for organic mulch and compost application The remarkable new Millcreek Row Mulcher works with all types of organic material, and even lets you adjust the depth and width of the mulch rows

Starting under $5000, no other machine compares when it comes to capabilities, versatility, and cost effectiveness Rugged construction Five sizes, from 3 4 to 13 cubic yard capacity Custom designs Call today for a free color brochure, or to discuss your specific needs

Berks County Dairy Adds New Levels To Milking System

animal. What we talked about building and what was really built are two different animals."

John said the experience has been enjoyable, and "interesting," a word he said he probably uses too much.

"I used the term, 'interesting.' Everything that you go through and the people you talk to and different ideas that people have about building things. It's interesting."

Sometimes finding an existing example of what John had in mind proved impossible.

"I went through this last year. We tried to go to see a milking parlor that had a single basement, like we built, and a single return. But we couldn't find any that were built that way. And then they designed it (for John) and we told them how we wanted it.

"I want to people to know, when they come here, where the front door is. Also when (a visitor) walks through the lobby and goes to the parlor, I wanted to walk in, under that crossover bridge and not know that I was walking under cows. I wanted all the ceilings at the same height. That lobby ceiling and cross-over appear to be the same," he said.

It has been achieved.

"I'm fortunate, I guess, in that I could see some of it, though I couldn't see everything," he said. "I saw an awful lot and was in on how everything was going to fit together and what this was going to accomplish. Not everybody would be that involved," he said, implying that custom building can require more of the customer than ordering a duplicate of an existing structure or facility.

For example, John said that one of the poured concrete walls stuck out in to the line of vision from the lobby, and he didn't think it was necessary. After two weeks, he had the contractor cut off the projecting section.

"I wanted to try to minimize the number of things that later would make me say, 'I wish I would have done this,'" Hix said.

"It was just me. I want to be able to sit in the parking lot and see the man milking in the parlor. The wall, the way it was there, cut down on the view. It's not really important, but I tried to make it important."

The wall didn't make a difference structurally, but aesthetically it made all the difference, he said. It also didn't interfere with contractor cooperation.

"We all really clicked," John said, "and we knew what was in each other's head. It's really hard to get through from one person's head into another person's head and be on the same wavelength. We talked about this thing a long time. It was all interesting to see it come together. It's amazing, when people are all on the same page, what you can accomplish. It's fun."

When the Hix's started the project they were milking about 180 cows. "I told the banker I figure we want to be around 230 cows by time we move, and we were milking 235 when we moved in Dec. 15."

John said they want to be milking 300 by the end of January and 400 by the end of February.

"We were milking 280 by the end of January; 365 to 370 by the end of February to mid-March; and then 400 and the milk tank ran over April 1.

"The time frames I did in my head and I knew why — payments started April 25. I knew why we needed to do certain things and you work toward the time frame."

Other planning involved sitting down with a lender and presenting a business plan.

"We cash-flowed it at 410 (cows) at a 19,500 (pounds of milk) herd average," John said. "We just about doubled our herd.

"Doubling a herd isn't as difficult as some people trying to get five times as what they're milking. That is very difficult.

"We knew that from the original farm, when dad went from 50 cows to 110 cows. At that time it was only doubling the herd, but you didn't know a lot of the things that happen when you go from stanchion to a freestall," he said.

Today is a little different, he said.

"There's a lot more information out there, and a lot of more people out there who can help you prepare for situations like that," John said.

"I think its easier today (to plan for an expansion and technology change) if you're not afraid to ask for advice and then figure out if it is good advice."

ATTENTION DAIRY FARMERS!

TIRED of low milk checks? TIRED of unpaid bills?
TIRED of hearing "THERE'S A SURPLUS...
BECOME MORE EFFICIENT...MAKE MORE MILK..."
TIRED of the small 10¢ to 15¢ incentives to stay where you're at?
ARE WE NOT WORTH MORE THAN CENTS?
FARMERS do we not have the product? (THE POWER IS IN THE TANK)

AMERICAN RAW MILK PRODUCERS PRICING ASSOCIATION "ARMPPA"

We are now in 18 states and still growing!!

ARMPPA is not a milk plant, but simply a price setting agency striving to work with all existing milk handlers.

ARMPPA is now working with farmers who want to price their milk before it leaves the farm.

LAST 40 YEARS PRICING HISTORY
(Based on M&W series and Basic Formula Price)

1963 – $3.11
1973 – $6.30
1983 – $12.49
1993 – $11.80

IT IS FINALLY ANNOUNCED THAT THERE IS A SEVERE SHORTAGE!!
HOW MANY OF YOU DAIRY FARMERS ARE MAKING MONEY FROM IT???
LET'S COMPARE OUR MILK CHECK TO THE CO-OP'S PAYCHECK.
THAT'S A MILLION DOLLAR STATEMENT.

For more information, call toll free: East Coast ARMPPA Office 1-877-367-6455

Cecil County Sets Old Time Farm Days

FAIR HILL, Md. — The Cecil County Fair will hold its second annual Old Time Farm Days on Saturday, July 25 and Sunday, July 26 here at the fairgrounds.

Antique tractors, gas engines, farm equipment, cars, trucks and horse drawn equipment will be on display.

Scheduled events on Saturday include an antique tractor pull at 1 p.m. and at 8 p.m. and an old tractor and vehicle parade begins at 7 p.m. On Sunday, there will be a slow tractor race.

Various equipment displays and demonstrations will take place throughout the weekend. Exhibitors are welcome.

For more information, contact the Cecil County Fair at (410) 658-7350 or Don Moore at (410) 620-0275.

The Building you want.
The Lease you need.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs as little as one monthly lease payment
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules match your cash flow Payment options include monthly, quarterly, annually, as well as, skip or specially designed seasonal payments

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.

will show how the school has been instrumental in opening the doors for opportunity in some area of agriculture and what that has done for the careers of graduates.

Fivek said that a graduate of the school, Nicole Rovner from Lancaster, spoke on opening day to the 64 students in the program about why she enrolled and what the program meant to her. Rovner, a staff attorney in the Natural Resources Section of the Virginia Division of Legislative Services, spoke about how the Governor's School impacted her decision to study wildlife and fish science and how, eventually, she earned a law degree that focuses on those studies. Rovner spoke about the "world of opportunity" that opened for her in various agriculture-related fields, according to Fivek.

Another graduate of the program is Kerry Golden, executive director of the Pa. House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee. Golden, originally from Chambersburg, is a 1986 graduate of the program.

Amy Eopechino-Taylor, originally from Hanover, is also a graduate of the program. She is a research scientist in product development at Hershey Foods Corp., Hershey.

The program is limited to the "sons and daughters of Pennsylvania taxpayers," said Fivek. Sixty-four free scholarships are granted to students that meet the requirements for entry into the school. Those requirements include a student application which includes an introductory essay, an essay on the student's topic of choice related to ag science, two high school teacher recommendations, and one recommendation from the high school counselor. The student must submit their high school transcripts. Students do not have to be enrolled in 4-H, FFA, or in an ag science curriculum in high school to apply.

The application is reviewed by a committee of the Governor's School. About 320 applicants were received this year. Out of those, 64 were chosen for the five-week-long school.

"One of the goals of the program is to help individuals understand just what is involved in agriculture science," said Fivek. Fivek said that people still misinterpret ag science to mean simply conventional farming—even though agricultural science takes into account a wide array of topics, from food engineering to paper production, plant production, and management.

The school "gives them a head start and prepares them to make the step from high school to college," she said.

In the end, graduates who go on to study and obtain degrees in an ag-related field can help shore up the shortage of qualified professionals in food and agricultural resource sciences.

Students enrolled this year come from various towns, including Sugar Run, New Holland, Berwick, Titusville, Uniontown, Elizabeth, Drums, Cochranton, Erie, Greensburg, Wind Gap, and Southampton. Students also attend from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

All students take core courses and 2-3 electives. Core courses involve more than one type of class plus laboratory experience. Students also pursue an independent study project (ISP) and receive leadership training.

The program's seminar component offers advice on higher education and career opportunities. Guest lecturers, discussion groups, and field trips round out the school. Course offerings are revised each year. ISP projects reflect research at Penn State.

The course provides a "showcase" of ag-related topics. Core courses include agricultural economics and agribusiness, animal science, agricultural engineering, food science, natural resource management, plant science, cultural and creative studies, and ecology and community. Research opportunities include the ISP, computer laboratory, and radiation concepts.

In radiation concepts, students study the applications of radioactive tracers and radiation imaging as used in agricultural and genetic research. Students tour the Penn State Radiation Science and Engineering Center and use Geiger counters to determine the penetrating capabilities of different types of radiation and the half-life of a radioisotope.

All this helps "provide hands-on experience in new technologies and research techniques available in the food, agricultural, and natural resource sciences," according to the 1998 objectives of the Governor's School. The objectives note the school will "assist the participants in learning that the agricultural sciences provides an array of interesting and rewarding careers."

"Feedback indicates that approximately 40 percent of the graduates have gone on to study something related to ag science," said Fivek. They have enrolled in a variety of programs not only at Penn State, but at Cornell University, Delaware Valley College, and other schools.

The last study to document what career decisions graduates have made was completed in 1991 noted Fivek. The next study, to be conducted in the following year will examine how the school has impacted their lives.

Because of the success of the program, other schools are consulting with Penn State about developing their own program.

One such state is South Carolina, which wants to model a program after the Pennsylvania Governor's School.

In all, there have been 768 enrolled in the school since began in 1986. Penn State keeps an updated database on all the graduates, including their career choices, where they live, what awards they received, and other information.

This Sunday, at Sunset Park (close to the University Park Campus), a reunion of graduates is scheduled at Alumni Day from noon to 5 p.m. The free picnic is open to any graduate of the school. Fivek said that it is "never to late to show up" for graduates interested in attending.

New York Farm Bureau Develops Policy

GLENMONT, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau will begin developing policy initiatives for the 1998-99 state legislative session with a July 16 "Summer '98 Grassroots Kick-Off."

Summer '98 Grassroots Kick-Off will be a daylong policy development, membership and political education and awareness event held at the Empire Room at the State Fair Grounds in Syracuse. It is open to all New York Farm Bureau members.

As a grassroots farm membership organization, New York Farm Bureau develops its policy initiatives through policy development exercises such as Summer '98.

All policy is developed through member participation, which sets New York Farm Bureau apart from many membership organizations.

This year's Issue Forum will focus on two important farm topics, "New York Tort Laws: Are they Driving You Out of Business?" and "Using IPM to Market Fruits and Vegetables." The state's largest farm advocacy organization also kicks off its membership effort.

This year's theme, "From the Grassroots Up, Farm Bureau the Driving Force," will highlight the nearly 30,000-member farm advocacy organization's reliance on membership in making things happen from the county government level all the way up to the state legislature.

Summer '98 Grassroots Kick-Off also will feature several workshops, including "Political Education and Awareness" and "Policy Development: A Key to Our Future."

New York Farm Bureau is the statewide lobbying/trade organization that represents more than 28,400-member farm families. The organization is known to its members and the public as "The Voice of Agriculture." New York Farm Bureau is dedicated to solving economic and public policy issues challenging the agricultural industry.

Transferable Development Rights: Bringing farmers and communities together

Over the past few years, agriculture has changed dramatically. In fact, it has changed so much, that it has caused many who do not work in agriculture on a daily basis to fall behind in ag technology.

For instance, many local officials, in areas across the United States, do not have farming backgrounds and are not aware of the multitude of regulations farmers deal with from day to day. From pesticide management to erosion management, many townships use a hammer to deal with regulations, when all that's needed is a screwdriver.

In order to help both farmers and officials overcome this hurdle, let's take a look at our townships' agriculture "toolboxes." Do they have the right tools for allowing the entrepreneurial spirit of farmers to grow while maintaining the character of the community?

One option that may be found in a township agriculture toolbox is Transferable Development Rights (TDR). Basically, the idea behind this tool is that it allows a landowner in specifically designated agricultural or conservation areas to sell their right to develop their land to a developer, who can in turn use the land to increase the density of development in other areas

Benefits of TDRs include

* Conservation land remains essentially undeveloped while residential development is still allowed

* Conservation landowners still receive a portion of the development value of their land.

* Developers can increase their density only by purchasing development rights, thereby cutting costs and selling more units

* The conservation area is protected while development is accommodated in designated growth areas.

So, how does a township set up a TDR program in their area? First, a legal framework for the program must be adopted. Second, "sending" areas, lands where development rights are created and from which they can be sold, and "receiving" areas, designated areas into which development rights are transferred, are created.

Landowners in a sending area are not required to sell their development rights, but they do have the option. And, anyone is eligible to purchase development rights, but only property owners in receiving areas can use the rights to increase the density of development.

According to Alan Strock, ag lender at Blue Ball National Bank, property ownership is often compared to a "bundle" of legal rights, with each stick in the bundle representing a separate divisible right.

TDRs do not work for everyone, nor do they work in every area. It is important to research your options before choosing what tool to use from your agriculture toolbox.

There are many resources for information regarding the specifics on TDRs and other options. Don't hesitate to contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension, your county Planning Commission or the Farm Bureau. These organizations will be able to help you find the tools that best fit your community.

Feel free to send your comments and ideas to Jim Shirk at The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry PO Box 1558 Lancaster, PA 17608-1558, by email at jshirk@lcci.com or call him at (717) 397-3531.

Selling

Most buying decisions are first based on an emotional commitment to a product or a person. Psychologists call this building of a relationship "social bonding". The successful salesperson is able to "bond" personally to a potential customer building a trust relationship. A national sales magazine survey revealed six common salesperson performance factors:

1) The relationship with the client remained after the sale.

2) They established trust relationships.

3) They understood the customer's needs.

4) They showed enthusiasm.

5) Each considered selling an art form.

6) Each had a high personal integrity.

Today's customers are buying more than product or service, what they are really buying is an adequate solution to their problem, a trusted consultant and value added service.

Listening

Most of us don't know how to really listen because we are too busy trying to figure out what to say next. Here are some ideas to develop "active" listening skills:

1) Make eye contact.

2) Do not let your mind wander.

3) Ask clarifying questions.

4) Paraphrase back.

5) Bite your tongue

6) Watch your tone of voice and slow your rate of speech.

7) Limit your physical movements.

The average listener retains only half of what is said in a 10 minute talk. Only 25% of what is retained is properly understood. Most of selling involves listening and understanding.

Social Bonding

A key to making social bonding work is showing empathy for the customer. Identify with your customers concerns. If you can illustrate your conversation with examples of similar situations, you draw the customer closer to you. What you are trying to do is let the customer know that you really understand what they are saying. You let the customer know you are speaking their language. In any sales transaction, it is important to trust each other before doing business together.

Social bonds can be ruined easily by inattention, expressing our frustrations, trying to get the customer to think our way and over loading the customer with information. Avoid alienation of potential customers by smiling warmly, nodding your head, making eye contact and taking notes. Think of a time you were at ease with a salesperson. Try to use this experience as an example for modifying your sales technique.

Are YOU being served?

I feel I'm an average consumer In my rush through life, not much thought is given to why I like a particular market or what my expectations are. If I take the time to think and observe, learning takes place when a particular experience is rewarding or disappointing. Using my own experiences as a customer, I am better able to meet the needs of potential customers for my business.

The customer might not always be right, but they are always the customer. Just remember to imagine yourself as a customer Would you want to shop here? would you want to buy this product? Are you being served?

Receive Scholarships

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Richard Bollinger and Nicole Eisenhower, both of Lancaster County, are the 1998 recipients of Keystone Farm Credit's two $1,000 scholarship.

Richard is the son of Thomas and Barbara Sue Bollinger of Lititz. He was graduated from Ephrata Senior High School where he was a member of the National Honor Society, Pennsylvania Math League, Quiz Bowl Team, and participated in the Big Buddy and Reading Buddy Programs, Science Fair, and FFA. Richard is a member of his church youth group and attended the Pennsylvania Governor's School for the Agricultural Sciences. He is the recipient of many FFA awards and was selected as "Teen of the Week" by the Lancaster New Era. Richard plans to attend Cornell University where he will study animal science.

Nicole Eisenhower is the daughter of Tim and Roxanne Grube of Elizabethtown. She was graduated from Elizabethtown High School where she was a member of the National Honor Society. She has been very active with 4-H and FFA and has received several awards for her activities. Nicole plans to attend Montana State University to study preveterinary medicine.

Vigilant Fungicide Applications Needed

ROBERT ANDERSON
Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The last week of June provided weather conditions in Lancaster County that were favorable for blue mold to produce spores and infest new plants.

Many fields have very active colonies of blue mold which are easy to see. Look for yellow spots on the top of the leaf which has a blue gray mold growing on the underside. The mold on the underside of the leaf is easier to find in the early morning while plants are still wet.

In order for blue mold to survive and thrive it needs tobacco leaves that are wet for prolonged periods and cloudy weather. Lancaster County's weather last week was very favorable for the fungus and brought a rash of new reports of blue mold.

As the number of reports increase, the number of potential sources of new infection expands.

Last week also saw additional fields with systemic blue mold. Once systemic, blue mold makes the tobacco plant unharvestable.

Blue mold can be prevented and controlled with frequent application of approved fungicides. The only EPA-approved fungicides for tobacco are Dithan DF and Acrobat MZ.

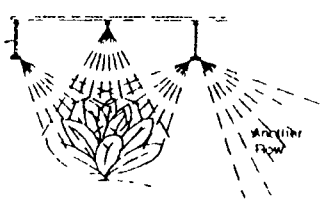
For best results, these fungicides need to be applied before blue mold is seen in a field. Spray schedules for fungicide applications range from 5 to 7 days depending on weather conditions.

Both fungicides for blue mold control require complete coverage of the tobacco plant with the fungicide. As tobacco plants get larger, sprayers will need to be modified to include drop nozzles, high pressures, and adding new larger pumps in order to apply the large volumes of water required to adequately cover and protect the crop.

ACROBAT™ MZ for Blue Mold Control in Tobacco

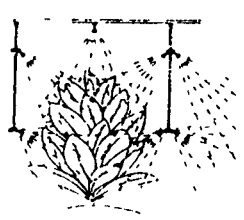
Application to Small Plants (transplanting up to 3 weeks)

- Use one hollow cone nozzle over the
- row and one on each side of the plant
- Apply 20 gallons per acre of water volume
- Spray at pressures above 60 PSI to achieve good droplet dispersion



Application to Mid-Size Plants (3-5 weeks after transplanting)

- Use hollow cone nozzles located over-the-top and to the side of the plant
- Apply 40-60 gallons per acre of water volume
- Spray at pressures above 80 PSI to achieve good droplet dispersion



Application to Mature Plants (6-8 weeks after transplanting)

- Use multiple hollow cone nozzles with drops
- Prevent drop nozzles from touching middle and lower leaves as much as possible
- Apply 80-100 gallons per acre of water volume
- Spray at pressures over 80 PSI to achieve good droplet dispersion

Management Practices - Article 6

Previous articles looked at how farming methods and size of business affect farm profits. How well you manage the herd also has a major impact on profits. Focus your management efforts first on those practices that have the potential for returning the greatest profit. Table 1 is an example of some potential impacts.

Table 1. Some Profit Boosters (assumes 18,000 lb. of milk per cow per year.)

	Example	Yours
Reduce debt per cow $1000 (Average term of loan is 15 yr. at 8%. See Article 3.)	115
More milk per cow (2000 lb. per yr. or 6-7 lb. per day) ($5 profit per additional cwt.milk x 20 additional cwt. milk.) (Gain 3-6 lb. per day with better genetics, care and feeding.) (Gain 3 lb. by dropping SCC from 800,000 to 200,000.)	100
Sell more cows for dairy purposes and less as culls (assume a 25% cow turnover rate) (half are sold for dairy at $1200; half are culled for $400) ($800 difference on half of the cows slod / 4 yr. life = $100)	100
Fat test increased 4 points without loss of milk (180 cwt. x 4 points x $0.13 per point)	94
Reduce feed cost $0.50 per cwt. - - without loss of milk	90
Reduce calving interval by 1 month (30 days) (Daily income over feed for 1st. 305 days = $4.80) (Income over feed per day beyond 305 = $2.30) (30 days x $2.50 less profit for each day beyond 305 days)	75
Reduce cull rate from 33% to 25% ($1200 heifer - $400 cull = $800 net cost of replacement) ($800 x 0.33 = $267 replacement cost per year) ($800 x 0.25 = $200 cost per year, a savings of $67)	67
SCC (milk quality) bonus of $0.30 per cwt. x 180 cwt.	54
SNF test increases 2 points (180 cwt. x 2 points x $0.08 per point)	29
Reduce calving age by 2 months (60 days) (60 days x $1.50 cost per day ÷ 4 yr. in the herd = $23)	23
Total impact	747
Compare to a milk price change of $1.00	180
Compare to the profit margin you need per cow (see Article 1.)

The cumulative impact of all the above changes could be about $747 change in profit per cow! That's equivalent to $4.15 per cwt. of milk! We can talk a lot about milk prices, but we have little influence over the prices we receive. However, we can sharpen our herd management practices in an effort to offset the negative impact of milk price declines, as illustrated in the table, above. In doing so, we also enhance our competitive position in the industry and help to insure the future viability of our business.

Locate the most serious bottle necks that are hindering production and profits. Fix these big problems first, before doing the easy fixes on the minor problems. Fixing minor problems may have little or no beneficial impact until the major bottleneck is fixed. For example, treating coliform mastitis will have no lasting effect until you provide cows with clean dry stalls and maternity areas, and having clean dry udders. And, if the cows aren't fed right, milk production may not show much of an increase, even though you cured the mastitis and corrected its cause.

MilkPEP, DMI Continue Milk Marketing Plan Integration

CHICAGO, Ill. — The Fluid Milk Processor Education Program (MilkPEP™) and Dairy Management Inc.™ (DMI) announced recently that the two organizations will begin integrating their marketing efforts and will continue to use both award-winning advertising campaigns — "Milk Mustache" and "got milk?".

As a first step in the integration of milk marketing efforts, "Milk Mustache" print advertisements in magazines will bear the "got milk?" tag line as early as August. Later in the year the tag line will appear on "Milk Mustache" ads running in newspapers, national magazines and outdoor venues.

National television advertising will continue with the current "got milk?" creative approach. Both DMI and MilkPEP license "got milk?" from California Milk Processor Board (CMPB).

The announcement is part of steps under way to launch the industry's first-ever unified milk marketing initiative that is jointly funded by milk processors and milk producers.

The integrated program is being planned and implemented by MilkPEP, DMI and the state and regional promotional organizations. Full details of the joint effort, which is expected to be about $190 million dollars, is currently on the drawing boards and will be unveiled in August.

The integrated marketing plan, to be implemented in 1999, is expected to include advertising, public relations and promotion.

"We are lucky to have two incredibly strong campaigns to work with, each with a tremendous amount of equity among consumers," said Tom Gallagher, DMI chief executive officer. "By combining forces behind the two successful campaigns, we are creating a powerful marketing plan to help increase milk consumption."

"The 'got milk?' theme is very memorable and has strong recognition with consumers, while the 'Milk Mustache' campaign has extraordinary visual impact and recognition with the cache of the country's most popular celebrities. So, it's natural to marry the two themes in the 'Milk Mustache' ads as a first step in integration," said Kurt Graetzer, executive director of MilkPEP.

DMI and MilkPEP have a licensing agreement with CMPB to nationally use the "got milk?" tag line.

Commenting on the announcement, Jeff Manning, executive director of CMPB said, "We are all in the business of trying to sell more milk to consumers."

House Agriculture Panel Sets Meeting At Ag Progress Days

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Rep. Ray Bunt Jr. (R-147) said the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee will again, for the second year in a row, hold a "town meeting" style public hearing during Ag Progress Days scheduled for mid-August in Centre County.

Bunt, chairman of the panel, said the committee will met on Aug. 20 at Rocksprings during Penn State University's Ag Progress Days. The meeting will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Red Barn building. There will be a one-hour lunch break from noon to 1 p.m.

"We are again interested to hear the concerns of farmers and others whose business and livelihood is made in agriculture-related businesses," Bunt said. "We are continuing to seek ideas on how state government can assist farmers and agricultural businesses to remain stable and be profitable."

Bunt said the town meeting style format of the meeting will help create an informal atmosphere leading to a free exchange of ideas and potential solutions.

"It will not be necessary for participants to have prepared or written remarks," Bunt said. "After arriving at the meeting people can just sign up for a five-minute slot to speak. Each committee member will have several minutes to respond and ask questions of the participants.

"We don't intend to limit the number of topics a speaker may discuss, but the issues should be pertinent to the role of state government in agriculture and how it can better serve the agricultural community," he said.

"We want to opoen the discussion to local concerns on statewide topics like farmland preservation, 'right-to-farm', and other land use issues, or barriers to the profitable operation of agricultural businesses," Bunt said. "Our desire is to hear about possible solutions. We don't have all the answers in Harrisburg and we know people around the state have lots of interesting and novel ideas. The committee members need to hear these ideas and discuss potential solutions to agriculture business problems. The result could lead to legislation in the General Assembly that would benefit agriculture across the commonwealth."

For more information about the Centre County meeting, contact Rep. Raymond Bund Jr., House of Representatives, House Box 202020, Harrisburg, PA 17120-2020, (717) 787-6937. Fax number is (717) 772-6952.

AJCA Offers Promotional Video

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — Learn about Jersey cattle from a 15-minute video produced by the American Jersey Cattle Association (AJCA).

This informative video focuses on the profitability of today's Jersey. It gives an overview of the Jersey breed, the dairy industry, and describes what the American Jersey Cattle Association can do for Jersey owners.

Viewers are introduced to recent statistics on reproduction, longevity, and the production efficiency of Jerseys. Top dairy producers comment on the advantage of owning Jersey cattle, stressing their ease of handling and their ability to create a profit in United States markets.

The video also provides an insight into the world dairy market and the Jersey advantage. Highlights include a growing export marked for Jersey genetics, evidenced by a 766-percent increase in international sales of United States Jersey semen since 1985.

Finally, viewers learn where to find information when Calvin Covington, the CEO and executive secretary for AJCA, reviews services and programs provided by the association. He emphasizes the availability of high-quality bulls through A.I. organizations and reports on current production genetic information.

This $15 video is ideal for information, education, and sales promotion for many audiences, such as 4-H and FFA groups, agriculture education programs, loan officers, breeders, or anyone interested in owning Jerseys.

To order, contact the Communication Department of the American Jersey Cattle Association at 6486 E. Main St., Reynoldsburg, OH 43068, or phone 614/861-3636. Orders may also be placed via the worldwide web at usjersey@iwaynet.net.

1998 Grazing/Forage Conference Proceedings Available

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pastures and forages are a central component of annual production systems in the Northeast.

Proceedings of the 1998 Grazing/Forage Conference held in March are available for purchase. The proceedings has 22 papers that were presented at the conference by producers, extension educators, researchers, industry personnel, and international speakers.

Ten different producers participated in the program. Two of the featured articles were by Dr. Sinclair Mayne, from Northern Ireland, entitled, "Forage Productivity and Utilization by Ruminants to Optimize Profit" and "Are We Selecting the Correct Dairy Cows for Grazing?"

The proceedings should be a valuable resource for producers, agricultural and industry professionals, university and extension educators, agronomists, animal scientists, nutritionists, and many others.

The proceedings are available for $10 per copy (including shipping and handling) from the Grazing Research and Education Center, 116 Agriculture Sciences and Industries Bldg., Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Make checks payable to Penn State.

THE BEST TIRES IN THE WORLD HAVE GOODYEAR WRITTEN ALL OVER THEM

The Thrill OF THE Hunt

GIVE A NEW LIFE TO YARD SALE AND FLEA MARKET FINDS

Summertime is the season of lazy days, barefoot walks, picnics but most importantly, it s the season of bargains! Bargains! BARGAINS!! Hidden treasures can be found at every yard sale, garage sale and flea market But what do you do with those random items that you found for a fantastic price? How can you coordinate them with your home? You can use them to reinvent the look of your favorite, or not-so-favorite room, just by using a little imagination and dye

Dye-stain the beat-up table that overstayed its welcome in someone s living room, and turn it into a colorful showpiece that adds pizzazz to your decor Accent your room with dyed throw pillows, lamp shades and picture frames Give faded lace tablecloths or curtains new life with a splash of color, or keep that "antique" look by dyeing it lightly Add a variety of color and texture to a room by dyeing towels, sheets, blankets and throw rugs

And don't forget to think creatively! An old mirror may need only a colorful refurbished frame to look terrific over your dresser A beat-up wooden chest can become a comfortable seat at the foot of your bed or under a window A scratched telephone stand can be trimmed with a vibrantly dyed dustskirt and serve as a new vanity table A discarded end table might be just the right bedside stand, just use Rit Dye to color match a slipcover for it Did you find several different long-lost kitchen chairs? Create a full set of personalized chairs, color coordinated, with just a sprucing up of dye! The trick is to keep your eyes open for new ideas everywhere—you can transform someone else's castaways into exquisite prized possessions!

Even the best yard sale or flea market finds are useless if you can't incorporate them into the decor of your home

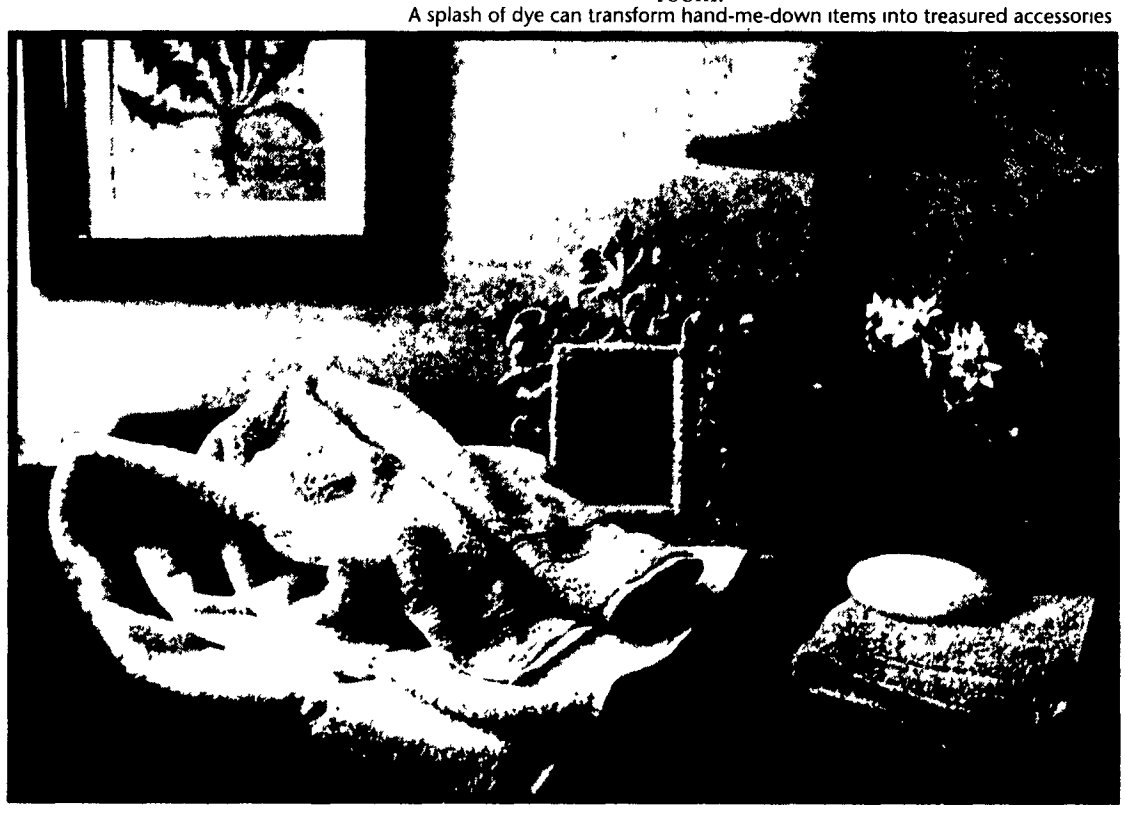
THE HOW-TOS OF TURNING TRASH INTO TREASURES

Add a splash of color to lamp shades and lace, revive sheets and pillow shams, accent frames and furniture with dye! It's an easy and affordable way to add warmth and charm to any room.

A splash of dye can transform hand-me-down items into treasured accessories



DYEING FABRIC

- You can dye fabric using one of three methods in the washing machine, in a sink or bucket or on the stove top
- Soak fabric in plain water before immersing it in the dye bath then follow package directions
- You can dye most washable fabric, including cotton, linen, silk wool, ramie blends, rayon, nylon or synthetic blends The only exceptions are polyester and acrylic which don't take dye well
- For best color results when dyeing fabric containing cotton, rayon, ramie or linen, add one to two cups of salt to the dye bath
- Since you may not know the fabric content of many yard sale finds, check the color often If the color is not as deep as you want it, remove the item, and try dissolving more dye in the dye bath before reimmersing the item
- Take items out of the dye bath when they look a little darker than you want—colors will lighten as they dry
- For the deepest color results, use the hottest water that is safe for the fabric The longer the fabric remains in the dye bath, the deeper the resulting color Items can remain in the bath up to one hour as long as the water remains hot and the item receives constant agitation or stirring
- When dyeing colored fabric, dye will mix with the original fabric color to produce a new color For instance, red dye over blue fabric will produce purple
- Print fabric will absorb dye colors in the light areas, but will not become solid The print pattern will still show through

Helpful hint: Rit Super Stain Remover, Rust Remover and Whitener and Brightener have been specially formulated to remove a variety of fabric disasters including stains, yellowing, color bleeding and rust marks—an important step for sprucing up rummage sale finds Unlike most bleaches, these products don't damage fabric fibers, making them the perfect choice for restoring vintage items. Make sure whites are their whitest and colors their brightest before dyeing to ensure maximum success These products can also give a new lease on life to items you decide to leave in their natural color

DYEING METAL

- Brush the metal with a metal primer and let dry Then brush on white gesso primer, and allow it to completely dry
- Use a paintbrush to paint on liquid dye straight from the bottle

LUSTROUS LAMP SHADES

- Dissolve dye in water according to package directions
- Dip an ordinary domestic sponge in dye and apply color to fabric or paper lamp shades using long sweeping strokes
- You may get a little streaking on the first coat, so let it completely dry and add more coats until you achieve the desired color

DYEING WOOD

- Before applying dye, strip all paint, varnish or wax from furniture or wood item
- Also, remove dirt or grease from surface with a warm, sudsy cloth Then rinse well and allow to dry
- Dissolve powder in one pint of simmering (not boiling) water in a saucepan on your stove With liquid dye, combine equal parts dye and water, then bring to a simmer
- Test the color using a paintbrush or sponge on the underside or back of the item, and allow it to dry For deeper color add more dye For lighter color, add more hot water The stained surface will appear slightly darker when wet
- Apply the warm dye solution to the surface with a paintbrush or sponge, using even strokes
- For smaller projects, such as baskets, mix the dye solution in a sink or tub, and dip items directly into the dye bath
- If the color appears too light when dry apply another coat To make the color lighter, go over the surface of the article with water and clean cloth
- To protect and seal in color, coat with a polyurethane finish, clear varnish or shellac
- Dyeing wood allows its natural grain to shine through

FIGHTING FAMILY DEBT

In 1997, 1.3 million consumers filed bankruptcies with an average debt of almost $36,000. Family debt is an enormous problem in the United States, and it not only affects our pocketbooks, it affects our marriages, our ability to parent well, and physical health.

Studies record that consumer borrowing has jumped 52 percent while savings have shrunk 23 percent over the past 25 years. United States consumers save less than half of what consumers in Britain, Germany, Belgium, France, and Japan save! It's time to fight back.

Cooperative extension across the United States, and now here in Pennsylvania, is sponsoring a program, "Money 2000." The goal of the program is to help families either reduce their debt by $2,000 or increase their savings by $2,000 by December 31, 2000. We think families want to fight debt, but they need encouragement and ideas about how to do that.

For instance, a family could save a significant amount of money by adjusting their car insurance coverage. Make phone calls to several agents and compare prices on similar policies. Increase your collision deductible from $250 to $500 or more. Both these actions could save you money. Then apply the saved money to an outstanding credit card bill or place it in a savings account. You have just fought back against family debt.

A consumer can do the same price-shopping for mortgage rates, car loans, or phone services. I recently asked to have my long-distance carrier change by calling plan, and it saved me about $10 in the first month. That's 10 that I can save for new furniture or shutters for our home.

Comparison shopping is one way to "find" money to save. There are some other ways to trim expenses. Consider the transportation portion of your family budget. In the summertime when it is nice weather, can your children ride bikes or walk to a neighbor's instead of asking you to drive them? Can you carpool to the little league game or church? Put the amount of cash that you normally spend each month for gasoline in an envelope. Begin making deliberate choices to drive less. At the end of the month, put the money left in the envelope in your savings account or apply it to an overdue bill.

A simple way to reduce your grocery bill is to drink more water. Instead of the soda, iced tea, fruit juice or coffee, drink water. Put the change you saved in a jar and roll the coins at the end of the month. If you are a coffee drinker, fill up your travel mug at home instead of swinging by a mini-market each morning. This may help you "find" $1 to $2/day to fight family debt.

Another way to reduce expenses is to pack picnic lunches for your family vacations and outings. Even if you purchase one less meal at a restaurant than normal, that's money saved. Check out last year's expenses (or guess at how much you think you'd spend eating out). Put that money in an envelope. Now buy drinks (or take water) raisins, sandwich meats, veggies, apples, etc., at the grocery store using the money in the "vacation food" envelope. Fill your cooler and hit the road. If you have money left in the envelope because you picnicked instead of eating out, take that money to the bank!

These are just a few simple ways to fight back against family debt. The savings may seem small, but if you are able to save between $2 and $3 a day by taking simple steps, you will be able to save $1,000 in a year. And if you apply that $1,000 to overdue bills or a credit card balance, you will save yourself LOTS of interest payments. It's worth the effort

4-H HAPPENINGS

4-H Community Club To Host Roundup

The annual roundup of the Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club will be held indoors at Pleasant View Retirement Community, Manheim, on Saturday, July 18 from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Club members have planned a fun-filled evening to culminate the 1997-1998 club year. The public is encouraged to attend this event.

A variety of games for the young and young-at-heart will be led by club members. Items from club projects such as basketry, rubber stamping, photography and more will also be on display. Members who have completed their project(s) and met the club requirement will be presented with a certificate of recognition during an awards ceremony which will close the event.

For more information about this event or about the Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club, contact organization leader Cindy Stahl at (717) 664-2055.

Sometimes, life makes no sense.

On a farm, lots of things make scents.

"I smell chicken 'poop' claimed grandson Josh last week, as Grandpa Farmer arrived in the kitchen fresh from a stint at the dairy barn and morning feeding chores. Chicken "poop" — dried and bagged — is what our 3 year-old grandson is accustomed to his dad buying for the backyard garden at their suburban Portland, Ore. home. So all animal/barnyard odors get that label.

Actually it wasn't chicken residue, but the Eau de Cow fragrance wafting in the air behind Grandpa Farmer as he scrounged around the kitchen for a mid-morning snack. The two farmers were headed off together on some pressing farm chore and needed food fortification for the trip

A farm would not be a farm without the accompanying scents of crops and animal production Some of those fragrances are pure aesthetically "country" — freshly-plowed ground, new-mown hay, a mow of shiny, new straw and the carmel-corn scent of just-opened, molasses-laced, calf feed And, because food production without them is impossible, there are the more "earthy" scents such as animal manures and curing silages

But, at the moment, the most pungent fragrance around the farm is one over which only Mother Nature has any control

We first crossed paths with it one evening about two weeks ago, after lingering at the pond until dusk to feed the geese and watch the fish jump at bugs. Sitting on the pier in the falling darkness, someone spied movement a few yards away in the meadow toward the house.

"Is that a cat running over their in the grass?" was the question. Night was coming so quickly that only a sort of dark blur was visible.

Then came another guess, based on some streaks of white mixed in with the dark moving blob of shadow, which was by then beginning to stretch into a couple of blobs.

"That almost looks like skunks."

We grabbed the kids and began trailing the blurry parade, which by then had become obvious as a family of mother and several baby skunks, number uncertain. Our trailing was kept to a considerable and safe distance, considering we had a baby and a 3-year-old in tow.

But, in moments, the largest blur made an abrupt about-face and headed back in our direction Obviously one mother skunk was not impressed with our even long-distance interest in her fascinating, night-foraging, family. We beat a VERY hasty retreat, though we were stillwell out of range of guided-missile skunk scent.

When it comes to skunks, one can't be too careful.

Grandma made a reconnaissance to the house with kids. Grandpa and daughter snagged a flashlight to try to get a better look at the little family, but were unable to find them. Still, they had to have headed up around the barns and buildings, probably to forage for grubs around the cattle lots.

A little later, I retreated to the back porch with the phone to return a business call, enjoying the balmy night and a bit mo e quiet to conduct the conversation Midway through the phone visit, The Farmer burst onto the porch at the same instant I detected the oder. .

"Skunk!" we exclaimed in unison.

Again, he grabbed the flashlight, shining it about the yard and what was visible of the farmstead. Nothing.

All settled back down. But in less than five minutes, a large, shaggy, white shape came trotting under the barn nightlight. —summit, the Great Pyrness dog owned by our son.

Does she make her rounds of the farm every night? Because, we've been treated to bedtime skunk scent for several consecutive nights at the same time. And, if so, how long will it go until.....?

My offer to contribute tomatoes for an anti-skunk-scent dog bath hasn't been needed. Yet.

Mother Nature may think skunks make good scents.

But if your large, shaggy dog turns up at the back door reeking of it, skunk perfume makes no sense at all.

Operation Hat Check

Staff from the Southcentral District of the Pennsylvania Department of Health will conduct "Operation Hat Check" at the Antique Machinery and Tractor show to be held by the Gratz Area Antique Machinery Association, Inc. at the Gratz Fairgrounds on Saturday, July 18.

"Operation Hat Check" is part of the Department of Health's educational campaign targeted to the public, particularly farmers and those who work outdoors, about skin cancer and sun protection.

Protective hats, sunscreen, lip balm, and skin cancer fact sheets will be given out to those attending.

For more information, contact the Southcentral District office at (717) 787-8092.

Consuming Thoughts

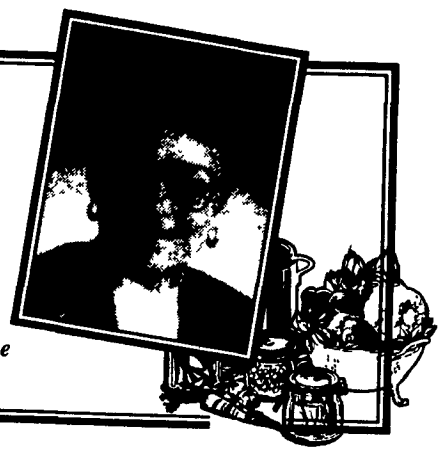
Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



The latest talk going around the picnic table this summer is potato salad is no longer boring. That's right, that dull concoction of lumpy potatoes, mayonnaise, and celery is a thing of the past.

It's been replaced with super spud salads, that will jazz up any summertime meal. These salads feature a delightfully different approach to the standard salad recipe. For instance, do away with that mayonnaise dressing you've used for years. Substitute a tangy vinegar dressing. Or pour on a topping that includes Dijon mustard and blue cheese.

Instead of adding the usual celery and hard-cooked eggs, experiment with mushrooms or crisp green or red peppers, bacon, chives or perhaps toss in sliced apples for a sweeter flavor.

Potato salad doesn't have to be fattening The potatoes aren't the fattening ingredient in the salads—usually it's the dressing that's the calorie-booster. If you're watching your waistline, use a plain yogurt or cottage cheese dressing. (If you just can't give up the mayonnaise taste, use half yogurt and half mayonnaise.) One last salad tip; when preparing salads with mayonnaise, remember to keep them refrigerated whenever possible. It's important to dispose of any mayonnaise salad that sits out at room temperature for two hours or longer.

Another favor variation that is a nice alternative to the mayonnaise type potato salad is a good German potato salad using vinegar. Here are a few tips for making German potato salad:

When deciding how may potatoes to cook for the salad use these equivalents: Fresh potatoes; 1 pound of potatoes equals about 3 medium potatoes or 3 cups peeled and sliced 2 1/2 cups peeled and diced.

Use firm, red round potatoes whenever possible for German potato salad. Red or white round potatoes (particularly the "new" spuds that haven't been in storage for months) make the best salad because of their firm consistency.

Good cooks know to leave the skin on when boiling potatoes, because many of the nutrients are found just under the surface. In fact, real potato fans never peel potatoes for salads.

Don't overcook the potatoes. Bring them to a boil, then cook them on a low setting until the skin "pops," or pulls away easily

Slice don't cube, the potatoes, for the best consistency.

Put the dressing on the potatoes while they are still warn. Then, let the salad sit in the refrigerator for a few hours, so that all the flavors are absorbed. At this point, it may be necessary to add more vinegar, or other seasonings. For extra flavor, add a diced apple or pickle to the salad.

If you have a quantity of fresh unpeeled potatoes left over, be sure to store them properly. Keep potatoes in a cool, dry, dark and well-ventilated place at 45° to 50°F., for several weeks. Keep only one week at room temperature.

Don't refrigerate potatoes because temperatures below 42° causes potato starch to turn to sugar, producing an uncharacteristic sweet flavor.

Lengthy exposure to sunlight or artificial light causes potatoes to turn green and acquire a bitter flavor.

Simply Delicious Summer Salads

Salads are a wonderful way to get your daily requirement of vitamin-packed, fiber-rich fruits and vegetables. But if you don't watch what you put on them, the fat content can really skyrocket.

The solution? Keep fat to a minimum by topping your salads with dressings created from fat-free mayonnaise or yogurt.

Another great thing about salads is their versatility. You can use virtually any combination of tender greens, sliced raw veggies, cooked asparagus, roasted red peppers, hard-boiled egg whites, beans—you name it.

Go on and get creative. Try these recipes.

TANGY FAT-FREE COLESLAW

½ head cabbage, shredded
1 onion, diced
½ cup fat-free plain yogurt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
4 tablespoons fat-free mayonnaise
Dash pepper and paprika

Place cabbage and onion in bowl. Toss together and set aside. In small bowl, mix remaining ingredients except paprika. Pour mayonnaise mixture over cabbage. Toss until cabbage is completely coated. Chill for one hour. Sprinkle with paprika just before serving.

SAVORY EGGPLANT SALAD

1 medium red onion, finely sliced
1-2 cloves garlic, minced
3 tablespoons olive oil
1¼ pounds eggplant
2¼ cups tomatoes, seeded, chopped
½ cup celery, finely chopped
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
3 tablespoons fresh oregano, inced
3 ounces light cheese, shredded

Soak onion in ice water to cover (to mellow flavor). Combine garlic and olive oil and set aside.

Prick eggplant all over with a fork and place in large pot of salted, boiling water to simmer until tender 8-10 minutes. Cool in colander. Cut in 1-inch cubes. (Peeling eggplant is optional).

Drain and towel dry onion slices. Combine with olive oil mixture, eggplant, and remaining ingredients. Cover and refrigerate. Toss before serving. Season with freshly ground pepper to taste.

Serve on a bed of mixed greens with polenta triangles, sauteed in olive oil, or with couscous and rice. Serves 6.

Featured Recipe

How many servings of vegetables do you eat a day?

Does your family complain that veggies are boring?

You should be eating three to five servings of vegetables daily. More and more research is showing that vegetables are rich in vitamins, minerals, and antioxidants. Some vegetables contain anticancer agents.

Alletta Schadler, Penn State extension agent, will be teaching new techniques for cooking vegetables in low-fat ways. New recipes and new salad and dressing combinations also will be taught.

Although the class isn't until Aug. 3, you should register now. Two classes will be offered on Aug. 3 at the Lebanon County Penn State Cooperative Extension, 2120 Cornwall Rd., Suite 1, Lebanon. The first will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. The same workshop will be repeated from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Cost is $3.

To register, send your name, address, daytime telephone number, and a check payable to "Extension Special Fund," to Lebanon County Penn State Cooperative Extension, 2120 Cornwall Rd., Suite 1, Lebanon, PA 17042-9777.

In the meanwhile, do you need a recipe to use fresh green beans? These are great for taking to a picnic.

FRESH DILLED GREEN BEANS

1½ pounds fresh green beans
½ cup olive oil
¼ cup green onions, minced
3 tablespoons fresh dill weed, minced or 1 tablespoon dried dill weed
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon fresh parsley, chopped
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
Pinch salt
Pinch coarsely ground pepper
⅓ cup radishes, diced
⅓ cup walnuts, chopped

Prepare at least one day ahead of time so flavors blend. Remove strings from green beans and wash thoroughly. Cut beans into 1½ -inch pieces. Cook green beans, covered, in a small amount of boiling water 6-8 minutes or until just crisp and tender. Drain beans and set aside to cool.

Combine next 10 ingredients in a jar, cover tightly, and shake jar vigorously. Pour over beans and toss well. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Just before serving, stir in radishes and walnuts.

GARBANZO SALAD

1 pound can garbanzo or kidney beans
½ medium red onion, peeled
10-15 sprigs fresh cilantro
2 tablespoons lime juice
1 tablespoon olive oil
Salt
Cayenne pepper

Line a large salad bowl with leaf lettuce. Fill bowl with mixture of sliced and shredded vegetables. Spoon on garbanzo salad. Spoon on avocado cream dressing:

1 ripe avocado, peeled and seeded
1 cup sour cream
1 cup mayonnaise
1 garlic clove
2 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ -¼ teaspoon red pepper sauce
¼ cup lime juice
¼ cup finely chopped green onion

Put all ingredients except green onions in a food processor or blender; blend until smooth. If necessary, blend in two batches. Refrigerate. Makes 3 cups dressing.

CHEF'S SALAD

Line four large salad bowls with lettuce. Mound sliced vegetables in a bowl:

Celery
Cucumber
Green pepper
Carrot
Radishes
Lettuce

Arrange julienne strips of meat and cheese on top:

Cooked ham
Cooked turkey
Cheddar cheese
Swiss cheese

Spoon on Thousand Island dressing. Garnish with hard cooked egg wedges and tomato.

SENSATIONAL SPINACH SALAD

1 pound spinach leaves, torn into pieces
1 cup sliced mushrooms
½ cup pitted ripe olives
½ cup coarsely chopped walnuts
½ cup real bacon bits
¾ cup creamy Italian dressing
3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
½ cup seasoned croutons

In large bowl, combine spinach, mushrooms, olives, walnuts, and bacon. Just before serving, toss with creamy Italian dressing; top with eggs and croutons. Makes about six servings.

ADADC Promotes Milk During Osteoporosis Month

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Eating a diet rich in calcium – such as milk and dairy products – is a prime step in preventing the debilitating disease osteoporosis.

That's they key message American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. (ADADC) public relations specialists wanted to communicate to consumers during National Osteoporosis Prevention Month this past May.

Teaming up with Tops Supermarkets, one of the largest retailers in upstate New York, ADADC sponsored free cooking classes in the Rochester and Buffalo stores.

Mothers and daughters were encouraged to attend these classes (dubbed "Bone Appetite") together to emphasize the importance of calcium consumption at any age.

Featured on the menu was a range of tasty, milk-based treats, such as Oreo Rocky Road Parfaits, Cafe Lattes, Spaghetti Carbonara, and Power Orange Smoothies.

In addition, ADADC arranged to place spokespersons from Tops Cooking School on WKBW-TV's "AM Buffalo" and Rochester's noon news on WROC-TV to demonstrate the recipes and offer easy-to-implement tips to increase calcium consumption.

County dairy princesses helped spread the word, making appearances at Tops Supermarkets throughout New York, to hand out the National Osteoporosis Foundation's lace ribbons and go through a quick "Osteoporosis: Are You At Risk?" quiz with shoppers.

Timed for the Saturday before Mother's Day, consumers also received dairy product recipe brochures (filled with last minute suggestions for special Mother's Day meals) and were encouraged to make sure all the moms in their families made a commitment to better bone health.

In New York City, ADADC sponsored an osteoporosis seminar at the fashionable Lord & Taylor store on Fifth Avenue.

During the seminar, shoppers were treated to a gourmet-flavored milk bar, featuring exotic flavors such as peach, blueberry, raspberry and mango.

The seminar also featured a speech by the national spokesperson for osteoporosis, actress Olympia Dukakis, who spoke about the "Richness of Life after 40."

Dr. Robert Heany, an internationally renowned expert in the field of calcium and bone physiology, appeared on News 12, New Jersey—that state's largest cable outlet. Heany, a professor at Creighton University, appeared on the "Daytime Talk" show, to discuss calcium's role in the prevention of osteoporosis.

TV crews from News 12 were also on hand at Robert Wood Johnson Hospital in New Brunswick, N.J. where doctors demonstrated an actual bone density test, an interpretation of the test and conducted interviews with a registered dietician and the hospital's chief of obstetrics and gynecology, who spoke about the importance of calcium for women.

ADADC also extended the "Bone Appetite" theme into a print publicity kit that was distributed to all daily and weekly newspapers throughout the marketing area. The kit included tips for using milk, not water, in all sorts of drinks and foods, including hot chocolate, rice mixes, couscous, soups, and frozen vegetables; and featured recipes for delicious calcium-rich foods, including a special "Calcium Crunch Milkshake" created especially for ADADC by New York City's famous ice cream shop "Serendipity 3."

Calcium Crunch Milkshake

Yield: one serving

1/2 cup frozen strawberries in syrup
1/2 cup honeydew melon
5 ounces milk
2 scoops vanilla ice cream colored sprinkles
crushed cookie

Mix strawberries, melon, milk and one scoop of ice cream in a blender. Blend until thick. Pour into glass and top with a scoop of ice cream, crushed cookie and colored sprinkles. Daily value calcium: 37 percent

Cut Flower Short Course

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) – Penn State Cooperative Extension will hold a "Cut Flower Short Course "

This two-day program will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, July 28 and 29, at the Ag Progress Days site in Rock Springs, PA

Cut flower production and marketing are fast becoming more than just a small farm alternative. As growers rapidly explore diversification and alternative cropping systems, cut flowers increasingly appear as a viable, profitable crop. This program will cover all aspects of flower production from producing plugs for transplant to field production to marketing A major feature will be the combination of classroom instruction with the cut flower weed and cultivar field trails.

Pre-registration is required The registration fee of $85/person includes all program materials.

Registration is limited so call soon For registration, call the Blair County Cooperative Extension office at (814) 693-3265

QUESTION — Betty Jakum, Littlestown, has a recipe for watermelon pickles that requires slaked lime. Does anyone know what it is and where to buy it? Is hydrated or pickling lime the same thing?

QUESTION — Dixie Fix would like to know where to buy an electric iron to bake New Year's cakes, which are thin European waffles like cake. A regular waffle iron and a Belgian iron make too thick a waffle.

QUESTION — D. Witmer, Carlisle, is looking for a recipe for chili used as a topping on hot dogs.

QUESTION — Leora Petet, Hollsopple, is looking for recipes for pecan log and for cherry nut filling for homemade candy.

QUESTION — A reader's husband requests recipes he remembers his family made. One is a chocolate pound cake and the other is a yellow sheet cake covered with peanut butter and iced with chocolate that tastes similar to a TastyKake Tandy Cake.

QUESTION — A reader from Finger Lakes, N.Y., would like a recipe to can together sliced onions and green bell peppers (not pickled). Also, she has heard that hot peppers can be stored in an unsealed jar on the counter covered with oil to use as needed and then use the flavored oil afterwards. Can anyone verify that the hot peppers will not spoil?

QUESTION — A New York reader would like recipes to make condiments (ketchup, mustard, relish, etc.) and sauces such as steak, barbecue, and chili sauces.

QUESTION — A reader would like to know how to make your own baking powder, cake flour, etc.

QUESTION — Cindy Barta, N. Jackson, Ohio, writes that she made quince jelly last fall. It was her first attempt at making jelly. Some of the jelly turned out fine and jelled nicely. But one batch did not gel. She had read that quince has natural pectin and did not use any pectin in the recipe, which did not call for any. She would appreciate any help or recipe that will make this type of jelly jel.

QUESTION — A Snyder County reader would like a recipe for white chocolate mousse cake.

QUESTION — A faithful reader would like a recipe for a sauce to make stir fry.

QUESTION — Marian Harman, Hughesville, would like a recipe for cherry pig, which she thinks is made with bread dough and fresh cherries.

QUESTION — Elaine Fyock, Windber, writes that a recipe for oven pickles processed in the oven at a low temperature and left set overnight appeared in this column last year. She mislaid the recipe and would like it. Did anyone clip it out? Please send it in.

QUESTION — Doris Bobb, Muncy, would like a recipe that had appeared in this paper last year for rhubarb peach jam. Did anyone clip the recipe to which she is referring?

QUESTION — A reader is looking for recipes to use frozen or home canned plums.

QUESTION — Betty Groff, Leola, would like a recipe for raisin sponge pie.

QUESTION — A reader wants a recipe for the brezel.

QUESTION — Rose Diehl, Bloomsburg, wants recipes for turkey scrapple and turkey bologna.

QUESTION — Shirley Jean Ash, Bridgeport, W.V., would like a recipe for Southwestern Vegetable Soup that tastes like that served at Shoney's Restaurant. She writes that it's the best she ever tasted, although she's been back to the restaurant several times and they didn't have it.

ANSWER — Susan Weaver, Richfield, sent a recipe for bagels that she said are very good.

Bagels

2 cups warm water
1 teaspoon sugar
1 package dry yeast
½ cup gluten flour
4½ cups all-purpose flour, or as needed
1 tablespoon salt (kosher)
Water bath:
4 quarts water
4 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons coarse salt

In small bowl, combine ½ cup warm water, sugar, and yeast. Stir and let stand until foamy.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, combine gluten flour, 2 cups all-purpose flour, salt, and remaining 1½ cups warm water. Add the yeast mixture and beat for 5 minutes on medium-low speed. Cover the dough and let it rise until it collapses, 1-2 hours. (When dough has collapsed, the sides of the bowl will show its former, higher level).

Stir in 2 more cups all-purpose flour gradually into the dough. Spread the remaining flour on a flat surface and turn the dough onto it. Knead until smooth and shiny. Place the dough in an ungreased bowl and let rise, covered, until double.

Punch down dough. Turn out onto a floured board and cut into 12 pieces. Cover with a dry towel, then a damp one, and let rest 10 minutes.

Remove one piece at a time under the towel, and begin making the bagel shapes. Roll each piece into a snake about 8-inches long. Moisten and overlap the ends; pinch together firmly. The bagel should be uniform ring with a center hole no bigger than 1½ inches. As each bagel is finished, place on a dry towel, then a damp one, over them and let rise for 30 minutes, or until they are puffed but not doubled.

While bagels are rising, preheat oven to 425 degrees. Make the water bath by combining the water with sugar and salt in a large pot and bring to a simmer. When the bagels are ready, risen but not doubled, drop about three into simmering water. Keeping the water at a bare simmer, cook the bagels for one minute on each side. Remove bagels with a slotted spoon, holding a towel under the spoon. Place them on 1 or 2 large non-stick surfaced baking sheets. (Do not use a greased pan).

Bake in the center of the preheated oven for 10 minutes; the bagels should be set but not browned. Turn them over and return the pan to the oven. Bake for about 5 minutes more or until the bagels are browned.

Cool bagels on a rack. Store in a plastic gag in the refrigerator if you'll be using them in a day or two; or wrap and freeze for several months.

ANSWER — Here are two recipes for summer entertaining from Racheal Krall, Lebanon County dairy maid.

Party Punch Cooler

1 quart milk
1 quart sherbert, any flavor
1 quart ice milk
3 cups pineapple juice
2 cups orange juice
3 teaspoons lemon juice

Soften ice milk and sherbert. Combine all ingredients in a large punch bowl, serve immediately. An ice ring of equal parts pineapple juice, orange juice, and water may be used if desired. Flavor of sherbert determines punch color. 164 calories per serving. Serves 20.

Stromboli

1 loaf frozen bread dough, thawed
1 tablespoon butter
6 slices cooked salami
6 slices American cheese
6 slices baked ham
½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese
Mustard and mayo to spread
Oregano to taste

Roll bread dough to cover cookie sheet. Spread melted butter on both sides. Layer salami, American cheese, and ham in the center. Spread on mustard and mayo. Shake on mozzarella cheese and oregano. Fold each half toward center and seal edges.

Bake at 400 for 20-30 minutes.

ANSWER — Thanks to Sadie Petersheim, Quarryville, for sending a recipe the family loves..

Broccoli Salad

1 bundle broccoli
1 bundle cauliflower
1 medium onion
2 cups grated cheese
6 pieces fried bacon
Sauce:
1 cup sour cream
1 cup mayonnaise
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt

Chop broccoli, cauliflower, and onion. Mix together with cheese and fried bacon. Combine sauce ingredients and toss with broccoli mixture. Refrigerate until served.

FAT-FREE FRANK SALAD SANDWICHES

2 packages hot dogs, coarsely chopped
2 hard-cooked eggs, whites only, chopped
½ cup shredded reduced-fat cheddar cheese, divided
¼ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat-free mayonnaise
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
2 small French-style loaves

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In small bowl, combine franks, eggs, ¼ cup cheese, celery, onion, mayonnaise, parsley, and mustard. Cut a thin slice off the top of each French loaf. Hollow out centers of the loaves, leaving a shell about ½ -inch thick. Fill shells with hot dog mixture. Wrap each sandwich in foil and bake in oven about 25 minutes or until heated through. Open the foil; sprinkle sandwiches with remaining cheddar cheese. Continue baking 2 to 3 minutes more, until cheese melts.

LAYERED SMOKED TURKEY-VEGETABLE SALAD

⅓ cup fat-free mayonnaise
⅓ cup nonfat sour cream
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon hot pepper sauce
¼ cup crumbled bleu cheese (optional)
1 pound tossed salad (lettuce, spinach, shredded carrots, shredded red cabbage, peas, sliced mushrooms)
1 cup fat-free turkey franks
4 cherry tomatoes, halved

Whisk first four ingredients in small bowl to blend. Mix in bleu cheese. Season to taste with salt and pepper. In a 6-cup souffle dish, alternate layers of tossed salad ingredients and chopped turkey franks. Spread dressing over, arrange cherry tomatoes on top. Serve immediately or chill up to 8 hours.

SMOKED TURKEY SALAD WITH DRIED CHERRIES

1 package turkey franks
1 cup green onions
¾ cup chopped celery
⅓ cup fat-free mayonnaise
3 tablespoons chopped fresh thyme, divided
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
½ cup dried cherries
Assorted greens
⅓ cup pine nuts (optional)

Chop turkey franks coarsely. Mix chopped franks, green onions, celery, ⅓ cup mayonnaise, and 2 tablespoons chopped thyme in medium bowl. Whisk oil, vinegar, and remaining 1 tablespoon chopped thyme in small bowl to blend. Season with salad and pepper. Toss greens and vinaigrette in large bowl. Divide among plates. Add cherries and nuts to turkey franks mixture. Place atop greens and serve.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — E. Beaver, Ringtown, wanted to know if fresh asparagus is better frozen or canned. She woanted tips on how to freeze and can asparagus. Here is some information from the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program and the Penn State Cooperative Extension. For best results, fresh asparagus should be prepared immediately after purchase, as its delicate flavor deteriorates quickly at room temperature. If asparagus must be stored, place the stalks in the coldest part of the refrigerator wrapped at the base with a damp paper towel.

To can, an average of 24½ pounds are needed per canner load of 7 quarts. Use tender, tight-tipped spears, 4 to 6 inches long.

Wash asparagus and trim off tough scales. Break off tough stems and wash again. Cut into 1-inch pieces or can whole.

How pack—Cover asparagus with boiling water. Boil 2 to 3 minutes. Loosely fill jars with hot asparagus, leaving 1-inch headspace.

Add 1 teaspoon salt per quart to the jars, if desired. Add boiling water; leaving 1-inch headspace. Adjust lids and process in a dial-gauge pressure canner at 11 pounds for 30 minutes for pints or 40 minutes for quarts.

To freeze, wash asparagus in cold water, trim, discard tough parts of stalks, leave whole or cut to desired length, blanch small spears for 2 minutes in boling water bath or 4 minutes for large spears. Cool, drain, and fill freezer container.

Old Tyme Peach Festival

MIDDLETOWN, Del. – The Peach Festival is held annually to celebrate the community spirit of the past century when the Middletown, Odessa, and Townsend area was a major peach producing region. The MOT area, as it is called, was ideally suited for peach growing, and with the railroad's arrival in 1856, increased the distance the area growers could ship peaches up and down the eastern seaboard. The entire community was focused on peaches! Unfortunately, a serious disease wiped out all the peach trees in the late 19th century, and commercial peach production never resumed

The annual Olde-Tyme Peach Festival helps to rekindle the community spirit through a day-long event starting with a parade at 9 30 a m The event will have arts and crafts, antique dealers and other vendors offering their special blend of "peach festival" products. Organized activities include the Peach Pie Contest (where all the pies are consumed after judging), a raffle of a special Peach Festival quilt made by the community members, along with games for children, entertainment throughout the day by local and regional groups, and much more. Food and drink of all types and descriptions will be available all day long.

Come out and relive the community spirit of more than 100 years ago on August 15 at the fifth annual Olde-Tyme Peach Festival! Located on Main Street in historic Middletown, with plenty of parking nearby. Make it a day to remember. The festival is sponsored by "Merchants of Historic Middletown" & "Middletown Historical Society"

DAYCO SUPER II V-BELTS

Now there's a belt that beats the toughest drive problems.

Many heavy-duty industrial machines demand more than conventional wrapped v-belts can stand Their punishing drives make ordinary belts crack under pressure The result unnecessary and expensive downtime

Now there s a solution to the consistent costly problem of replacing or retensioning belts It s the revolutionary new Super II™ v-belt from Dayco The Super II belt was designed specifically for the most brutal applications And its performance blows the cover off conventional wrapped belts

In heavy torque high horse power and extreme shock load comparisons it s not even a contest The Super II v belt is stronger more flexible and lasts far longer

Innovative design & construction provide extra strength and stamina

The secret to the Super II v belt s durability is its unique construction The central position of the polyester cords in the neoprene rubber core provides greater strength balance and longer life Multiple fabric plies top and bottom enhance flexibility And Dayco s unique raw edged construction gives it a better grip for controlled slippage

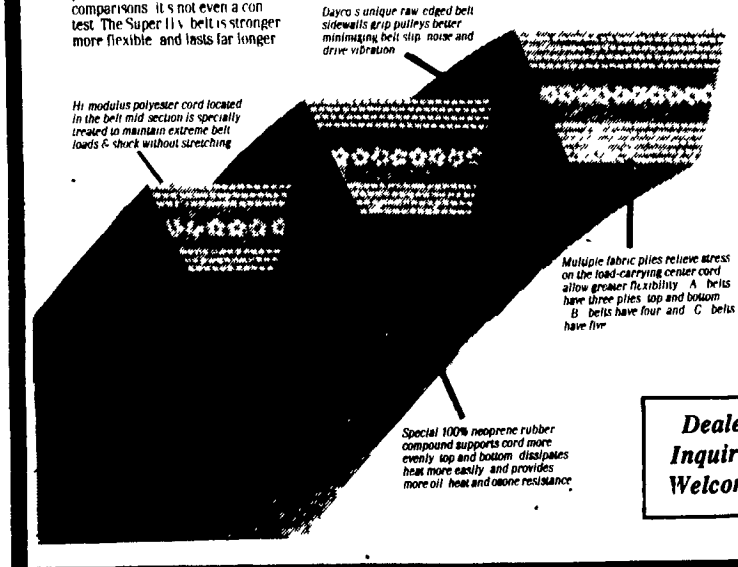
These attributes combined make the Super II belt superior to conventional wrapped belts in every way

Test the Super II v-belt on your toughest drive

- The Super II v-belt was field-tested for two years on the most severe applications rock quarry shaker screens lumber mill tree debarkers and pipe descalers In every case it outperformed conventional wrapped belts by a wide margin But the only test that really counts is the one you do on your own equipment

Try the Super II belt on your toughest drive problem You ll be so amazed by its incredible endurance that you ll want to put it on all your drives In fact we re so sure you ll be pleased with the performance of the Super II v-belt that in the unlikely event you re not satisfied we ll refund the original purchase price or replace it with a conventional wrapped v-belt

The Super II v-belt from Dayco The super problem solver



Dayco s unique raw edged belt sidewalls grip pulleys better minimizing belt slip noise and drive vibration
Hi modulus polyester cord located in the belt mid section is specially treated to maintain extreme belt loads & shock without stretching
Multiple fabric plies relieve stress on the load-carrying center cord allow greater flexibility A belts have three plies top and bottom B belts have four and C belts have five
Special 100% neoprene rubber compound supports cord more evenly top and bottom dissipates heat more easily and provides more oil heat and ozone resistance

We're Cookin' Now!

Do you ever help out in the kitchen? No matter how much time you spend in the kitchen, it's important that you follow safety guidelines and have adult supervision

Before you begin

1. Ask permission to cook or bake and to use the kitchen tools
2. Put an apron over good clothes or wear old clothes Be sure your clothing is not too loose so it doesn't drag through flames or the food Roll up your sleeves If your hair is long, tie it back
3. Read the recipe through Before you start, get together the ingredients equipment and supplies you need for the recipe
4. Wash your hands thoroughly

Cooking safely

1. Wash your hands thoroughly after handling any raw meat Use separate knives and cutting boards for raw meat
2. Set hot pans and dishes on heat proof surfaces only Turn handles of pots and pans to the inside of the stove so they don t stick out
3. Always use a pot holder even when cooking in the microwave to make sure you don t get burned
4. Keep towels and pot holders away from open flames and hot burners
5. Make sure an adult is present when you use sharp knives, electric appliances the stove or the oven
6. Clean up as you go It will make cooking safer and it will be easier to clean up when you re done
7. Don t let food stand at room temperature more than 1 / hours
8. Cover your mouth and nose when you sneeze or cough, then wash your hands before eating or cooking
9. Wash fresh fruits and vegetables thoroughly with cool water before eating
10. Stay away from foods that look or smell stale or moldy
11. When using a microwave, follow the package directions to make sure the food is cooked correctly Let it sit for a few minutes when it comes out of the microwave so it s not too hot to eat

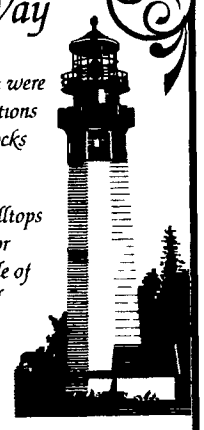
Lighting The Way



Lighthouses are fascinating structures that were designed to give ships a reference for their locations They often indicate that there are dangerous rocks in the area, too

During ancient times, people lit fires on hilltops to warn ships of those rocks Later, masonry or steel-frame towers were built that were capable of withstanding severe storms and were equipped with optical and sound signaling systems

The first lighthouse, Pharos of Alexandria, is one of the Seven Wonders of the World It was built in 280 B C , was about 350 feet high and had a wood fire at the top The first lighthouse built in the United States was the Boston Light, constructed in 1716

With the advancements in construction and equipment, the first towers completely exposed to the sea were built in the 18th century Then came improvements over the old wood, coal and oil ways to light the towers In 1782, the Swiss scientist Aime Argand invented the Argand lamp It was an oil lamp with a circular wick, which was protected by a glass chimney For more than a century, Argand lamps were used for lighthouses

In the 1920s, the incandescent lamp was developed, and it is standard in lighthouses today During the early 1900s, reflectors and refractors were developed so the light could be seen as one powerful beam Then that beam was rotated so it could be seen from any direction

How do raccoons learn to hunt?

Young raccoons learn just about everything from their mom They depend on her In fact, without her they wouldn't live past the first few weeks — raccoons are born blind and completely helpless.

Baby raccoons, called cubs, only weigh about 2 ounces when they are born in the spring A litter of two to six cubs crowd together in a tiny den their mother picked out. Ideally, it's in a hollowed-out nest high up in trees, so other animals can't hurt her cubs.

At first, the cubs eat just their mother's milk By the time the cubs are two weeks old, the distinctive black mask and tail rings of adult raccoons begin to appear on their fur Their eyes open when they are about three weeks old. Within a couple of months, the cubs outgrow their tree nest, so their dutiful mom carries them, one by one, in her mouth to another nest on the ground. By the time the cubs are four months old, they are strong enough to go on short hunting trips with their mother.

While all this is happening, Mom Raccoon is teaching the cubs to climb trees, hide from predators and search for food such as berries, plants, corn, eggs, fish and mice. (And yes, if they are in a city, Mom Raccoon probably teaches them how to knock over garbage cans, too Raccoons aren't picky eaters.) Pretty soon, the whole family is exploring and feeding during the night, and hiding out during the day

By September or October most of the cubs are off on their own — practicing what their mother taught them!

Scientifically yours, Twig

Avoid 'Sour' Mulch

Lots of things are sour; grapes, cherries, bark mulch, etc.

Even wood chip mulch can go sour if not stored properly.

Decomposing, large (6-12 feet high) mulch piles occasionally sour.

Without oxygen, a toxic by-product results of various organic acids and alcohol. If mulch is spread in landscape beds these acrid odors are highly toxic to plants. Theses strongly pungent odors are released after breaking open the pile.

If you are buying mulch (shredded tree bark, old sawdust, mushroom compost or bark chips) and storing it for later use, keep these precautions in mind. Most bark mulch that was stored properly, should not go sour. Mulches that have not soured should have a fresh garden aroma.

If the mulch smells like vinegar, sulfur or ammonia, it has probably gone sour and should not be spread in flowerbeds.

Finely shredded mulches are especially prone to 'sourness.' Often caused by compaction, store mulch in several small piles rather than one large one. Mulch piles that remain intact for more than one week should be no higher than 4 feet.

Mulch piles that are used and replenished regularly can be higher than 4 feet. Shape piles so that water runs off and does not puddle into the center of the pile. Water fills pore spaces, displacing oxygen, resulting in sour mulch. Better yet, cover mulch piles with a tarp to prevent waterlogging.

Turn or mix much piles if they are stored in one location for a long time. This allows any toxic byproducts to dissipate and incorporates fresh air to reduce further anaerobic decomposition.

If you do find your mulch went sour, spread the mulch out in a thin layer on a paved surface. Let the toxic vapors naturally dissipate for three to seven days Then apply the mulch to a small area of plantings and wait for several days. If plants don't show wilting, discoloration or other abnormal growth indicative of sour mulch, the mulch is safe to use on the rest of your garden.

Avoid using sour mulch in containers, recently planted flower beds, or along the edge of landscape beds. Annual flowers planted prior to spreading sour mulch may die within 24 hours. Plants affected often have chlorotic leaves, leaf scorch or plant dieback.

Another way to check for sour mulch is to check the pH. Sour mulch will have a pH of 1.8 to 2.5 which makes neutralizing with lime unreasonable.

Lastly, do not overapply any type of mulch. Dense mulches like sawdust should not be more than 2 inches thick while shredded bark a maximum of 2 to 4 inches thick.

4-H HAPPENINGS

North Jackson Ag 4-H Club

A meeting of the North Jackson 4-H Ag Club was held recently at the home of Joe and Sandy Pavelski

The club talked about the trip to Penn State for the Blue and White game and the tours of the mushroom plant and Mastitis Research Center. Questions were answered on project books and schedules were handed out Dairy and horse camps were discussed.

Katie Onyon and Jessica Sartell talked about the Delaware Valley judging trip. Katie placed fifth and Jessica placed tenth.

Demonstrations were given by Katie Onyon and Holly Carey on cake decorating, Aaron Onyon on making a wooden race car and racing it, Abby Onyon on preparing a speech for school, and Andrey Onyon on reloading a bullet.

Golden Fleece 4-H Club

One new member joined the Golden Fleece 4-H Club during its last meeting in Thompson

Members discussed a possible fund-raiser using Krispy Dream Donuts They also discussed the possibility of purchasing electric clippers so the members can ready their sheep for the fair

A trip to New York to see a broadway show this summer was tentatively planned for the group.

Jason Corey updated members on County Council happenings and names of suppliers of market lambs were given to those needing to purchase them for their project.

Bucks County Holds 4-H Fashion Revue

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — On June 19, Family Heritage Retirement Community in Doylestown served as host for the annual Bucks County 4-H Fashion Revue

Twelve 4-H members participated in this event During the afternoon, participants were involved in three workshops and were judged

Judges for this event were Valerie Gardener and Jean Flynn from Sew Smart Fabrics, Doylestown; and Nancy Moran and Mary Martinez, both family and consumer science teachers

Kristen Strouse, former Miss Bucks County presented a workshop on modeling. Participants also appliqued children's clothing which were donated to a representative from "A Woman's Place" during the 7 p.m. 4-H Fashion Revue Program.

Family members, friends and Family Heritage residents were in attendance

Senior 4-H participants were Amber Griffin, Chara Histand, and Kim Reichner, all members of the Hilltown 4-H Club Junior 4-H participants were Beth Diloro, Melissa Gallagher, Sharla Remick Trudy Yoder, Bridget Ziemba and Anna Hollenbach of the Hilltown 4-H Club; Elizabeth King and Jillian Mobus of the Levittown 4-H Club

Those expected to compete in the Southeast Regional 4-H Fashion Revue on July 7 in Leesport include Griffin, Histand, Reichner, Remick, Williams, Mobus, Gallagher and Ziemba

Group Treasures Pa. Dutch Dialect

JINNY WILT
Adams Co. Correspondent

MILL CREEK (York Co.) — Lee Thierwechter pages through his loose-leaf notebook filled with Pennsylvania Dutch stories and sits down in his lawn chair which is set among a grove of trees by York County's Mill Creek.

Gathered in a circle around him are members of the Pennsylvania Dutch Heritage Group who have come to their annual picnic at the home of member David Sipe with the added attraction of listening to Thierwechter of Belleville, Huntingdon County, read his stories.

He reads mostly in English with a Pennsylvania Dutch accent – letter v comes out as a w – for those in the group who cannot understand the Pennsylvania Dutch dialect, but a word or phrase of the dialect still creeps in

Writer of a column in the Pennsylvania Dutch dialect for a weekly newspaper near his home, Thierwechter has also published a workbook for those who want to learn more about the language A retired manager of an Agway store in Belleville, he also teaches classes near his home and will be announcing new sessions in the fall.

Thierwechter is like many of the members of the group who spoke the dialect until they reached school age. Not only did they learn reading, writing and arithmetic when they entered school, these students also needed to learn a second language – English

The language is a dialect from the Palatinate region of Germany and was brought to the United States by the early settlers from that part of the world. There are several dialects under the umbrella of Pennsylvania Dutch, or as some prefer Pennsylvania German.

When members of the York group from different areas of the Commonwealth converse they will often note that they use a different word for the same object.

Orpha White of York, president of the group when it organized in the mid 1990s in an effort to bring people who spoke or were interested in Pennsylvania Dutch together, said, as a child growing up in the northern Dauphin County, the dialect was spoken at home. "It was all I knew when I went to school," she said.

At the time of the group's organization many people who attended the first meetings said they no longer had anyone to speak Pennsylvania Dutch with because the use of the dialect was dying out. Many said their parents frowned upon their use of the dialect because it showed you were poorly educated.

But today some of those who never learned to speak the dialect, even though it was spoken in their homes, are joining the group to learn more about the language.

One of those is Ruth Gingrich, of Mount Wolf, president of the group.

Ruth said, "We read about the meetings in the newspaper and my sister Rachael (Gromling) and I were very interested. We had very much background because our grandparents and my father and his brother always talked Dutch when they were together. And daddy's relatives are all from Lancaster County and they are the River Brethren and a lot of them still use the language so we were interested, but I can't speak it."

Although the two sisters have taken classes to learn the dialect, they can't hold a conversation in it.

Ruth said she gives her time to the group because the member's goal is to preserve the language. "We don't want to see it fall by the wayside," Ruth said.

She noted that the group meets the third Saturday of each month at 2 p.m. in the community room at York's Galleria Mall in Springettsbury Township. All sessions are open to the public. Speakers are often on the agenda and present information about Pennsylvania Dutch and its origins. Members also attend Pennsylvania Dutch activities held throughout the Commonwealth.

Sipe, the group's treasurer, said he too joined the organization because of his interest in the dialect.

"My grandmother spoke the dialect, but when we'd go to town she'd say 'speak English.' They didn't want the people to know we were dumb Dutchmen," he said with a laugh.

"Our parents didn't want us to speak Dutch, but it was all right for them to speak Dutch because then we didn't know what they were saying," he continues.

"I've been in and out of it. When I was in the Air Force in the mid-50s, I met a first lieutenant from Lehigh County and he could speak Dutch. I got back interested in it again, then I got transferred and he got transferred," he said.

Once back home over the years he has taken classes whenever he found them available. "I'm still not as fluent as I'd like to be. I can read probably a lot better than I can speak it because I don't converse with somebody everyday, but I read it everyday."

"Very faithfully ever night I head up the wooden lane and after I take a shower I'll lay in bed and even if it's just one page I'll read," from publications written in the dialect, Sipe said. He keeps a Pennsylvania Dutch-English dictionary by the bed to look up words he doesn't know.

He hopes to see a teacher offer classes to area people who are interested in the dialect and one of the goals he wants the group to reach is continued preservation of the language for the younger generations.

David, who is often mistaken for C. Everett Koop, former head of the Food and Drug Administration, first grew his Amish-style beard 26 years ago. His beard, straw hat, and suspenders give him the look the movie moguls wanted when they were casting extras in Tim Allen's movie "For Richer, For Poorer." He played an Amishman. Had they asked him to speak Dutch, he'd have been able to do that too.

Lee R. Thierwechter of Belleville, Huntingdon County, reads Pennsylvania Dutch stories to members of the Pennsylvania Dutch Heritage Group. Thierwechter writes a column in the Pennsylvania Dutch dialect and was speaker at the group's annual picnic.

Members of the Pennsylvania Dutch Heritage Group gather at a picnic at the home of David and Shirley Sipe, Mill Creek Road, in York County.

Mary Malott, with friend Finley sitting on her shoulder, visits with Lee Thierwechter during the Pennsylvania Dutch Heritage Group picnic.

Safety Camp For Adams County Youth

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Would your child know what to do if an emergency happened while she or he was alone? If your answer is no or you're not sure, then let us present the 1998 4-H Safety Day Camp. It's coming to the South Mountain Fairgrounds on Thursday, July 23, from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

4-H Safety Day Camp is open to any Adams County youth ages 8-13. There is a registration fee of $2 per child. This fee helps defer the cost of a catered lunch, a T-shirt, and other surprises for each participant.

The campers will participate in workshops including: Identifying Farm Hazards; Meet the Computerized D. B. Pest; Bicycle Safety; Fire Safety; Rototiller, Weed Whackers, and Chainsaws; Hidden Hazards; Firearm Safety; Safety Jeopardy; Pools, Ponds, and Creeks; and Disability Dilemmas.

Other features include demonstrations on glow germ and grain in a bucket along with a possible appearance from Life Lion Helicopter. The day will conclude with a simulated farm rescue.

All campers will receive a catered lunch provided by Jane's Market. They will also have snacks donated by Utz and Snyders. Ten lucky campers will receive a new bicycle helmet when they attend the Bicycle Safety workshop. No one will go home empty handed. Each camper will receive a t-shirt, safety information, and other cool stuff.

The 4-H Safety Day Camp is sponsored by Progressive Farmer Magazine, 4-H Clubs of Adams County, Inc., and the American Trauma Society-PA Division.

For more information on Safety Day Camp contact the Adams County Extension Office between 8:00 and 4:30, Monday through Friday (717) 334-6271 or (717) 624-4525.

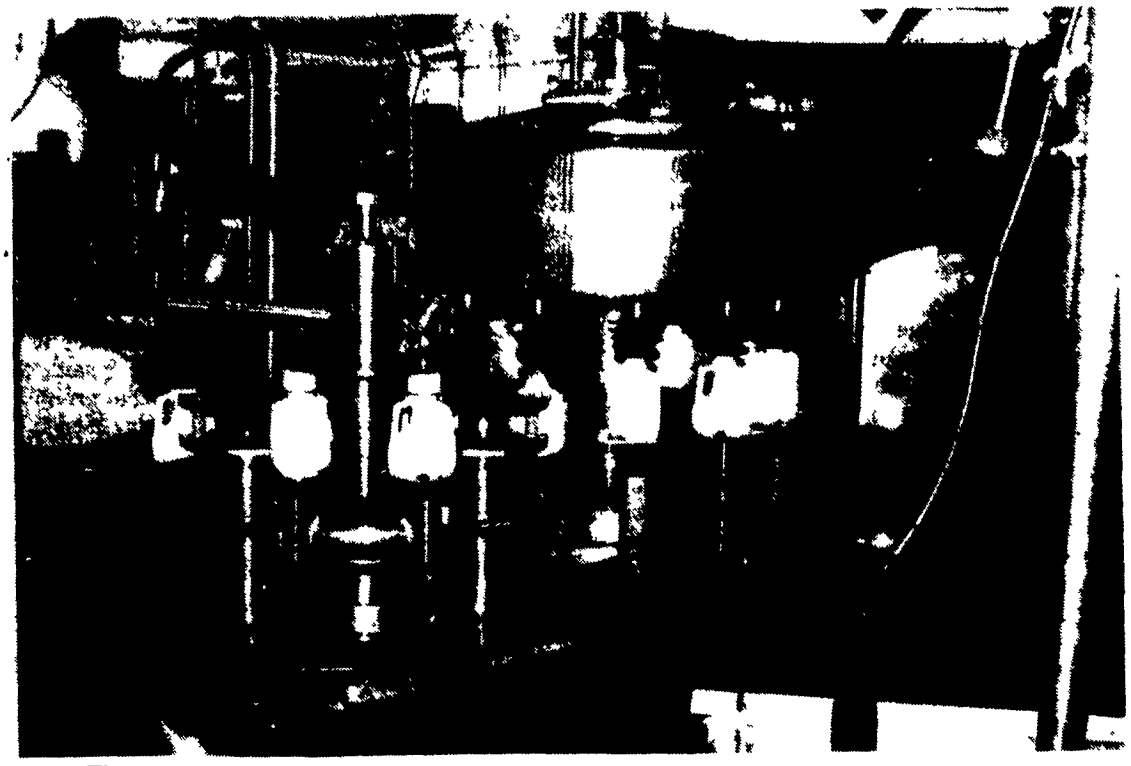
Goat Milk Bottling Plant Looking For Distributors

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

REEDSVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — The Central Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Co-op located near Reedsville, Mifflin County, became a grade A goat milk bottling facility as of January.

The plant received 400 gallons of goat milk every day from 14 producers. One distributor, Peter Zumas of Bethlehem, purchases 500 - 600 gallons each week and plans to buy more. He distributes quarts of goats milk through Freshmade Company in Philadelphia and Alberts Organic in Bridgeport, New Jersey. Zumas also owns a goat dairy and feta cheese-making facility. He's been in the business for 18 years.

Peter Zumas of Bethlehem finds a demand for goats milk throughout Philadelphia and New Jersey



The Central Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Co-op bottles goats milk for a growing market.

"Goat milk is easier to digest than cows milk," Zumas explains. "I think it's the drink of the future. There's a demand for it in big cities even though it's a bit more expensive."

The Central Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Co-op bottles what Zumas needs then makes the rest into wholesale blocks of Cheddar, Jack, and Colby cheese. Board president David H. Yoder would like to see the co-op's goat milk distributed in the Baltimore and Washington areas.

Facilities for the co-op were built more than 30 years ago to serve as a milk collection site for farmers handling milk in milk cans. Currently, about 200 can and 23 bulk tank dairy milk producers market their milk through the co-op along with the 14 goat milk producers.

In addition to Yoder as board president, Debra Rhodes serves as secretary/treasurer, and Larry Krepps inspects farms as fieldman.

Dairy Collectibles Find A Home

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

WESTMINSTER, Md – If you are curious about historic dairy collectibles from Carroll County, Mike Grossnickle is the man to talk to Born and raised on a dairy farm near here, but no longer a dairy farmer, Mike has channeled his love of all things dairy into a passion for collecting that gives new life to the adage "If one is good, then two are better."

With a collection of about 500 dairy-related items, the Harford County resident is an enthusiastic historian of the dairy industry. And while each charming piece is in itself a fascinating remembrance of the past, taken as a whole, the collection really documents the history of the dairy industry in the county from the turn of the century through the 1970s

Mike grew up as a farm boy in Carroll County His father, A T Grossnickle, had a dairy farm at Middleburg, and then later the family milked grade and registered Holsteins at Three-Nickels Farm, near Union Bridge They stopped shipping milk in 1983 Mike now works at the Carroll County Farm Museum in Westminster, and also raises produce at his home in Harford County.

Mike also has another connection to the dairy industry that has influenced his collecting When he was growing up, his father, A.T. Grossnickle, worked at Western Maryland Dairy in Detour, and then later at Embassy Dairy in Washington, D.C. in the department where they tested the milk. An uncle, A.T.'s brother, worked at Embassy Dairy in the bottle exchange in the early 1930's. So in hearing the stories the two brothers would tell, Mike had a great resource for information on old dairies and on milk bottles in particular.

Probably the first thing Mike acquired was an old can from the Castle Cheese Company that came from his home. He remembers always seeing the can when he was growing up. He can't remember the first bottle he got

"I used to go to a lot of farm sales and I used to see them around. To be honest, I can't remember the first one I got," said Mike, "it's a dangerous hobby. Once you get started, it's hard to stop"

Luckily for Mike his wife, Janet, understands the "danger" in collecting. She, too has the heart of a collector Instead of milk, though, her passion is tea, and according to her husband, she has a collection of several hundred teapots The couple both have displays set up at home

For Mike, the value of his collection lies in it's diversity. He started out with milk bottles and cow creamers, and those still make up the bulk of his collection. But instead of concentrating on just one item, he soon diversified and started acquiring all different kinds of ag-related things. Now in addition to the glassware, there are flour sacks, canning labels, all kinds of literature, old herd classifications, and banners from old fairs Most of the things are from Carroll County

Hearing Mike talk about his collection is a lesson in history. Not only can he tell the interesting stories of how he came to own each item, he is also an authority on placing them in the context of an evolving dairy industry in rural Carroll County A perfect example is a group of bottles he has from Swissvale Farms. Swissvale Farms, outside Westminster, was the last processor to bottle milk in the county, according to Mike. They bottled until about 1976. In about 1962, Swissvale absorbed another dairy, Tower Farm dairy. They had milked cows in Southern Carroll County, and the milk was shipped to a dairy bar around Route 26.

Willow Farm, with addresses in Frizellburg and Westminster, was probably the most prolific in the county in terms of the number of bottles they had, according to Mike. They had round bottles, cream-top bottles in round and square shapes, war bond bottles that were returnable, baby-face bottles, and a variety of sizes ranging from half-pint to half-gallon. They had the only cream-top bottles in the county, and also later had paper cartons. Mike has a Willow Farm cream-top bottle with a cream-top spoon from the late 1930's. The curved spoon nestles just over the narrow neck of the milk part of the bottles If you wanted cream, you left the spoon in place and poured it off the top. If you didn't, you removed the spoon and shook the bottle.

Mike with some of his collectibles. One of the older items in his collection is the serving platter crafted by the Buffalo, New York artist R.K. Beck. The gilt-edged platter decorated with Holstein, Jersey, and Guernsey cows dated from the turn of this century.

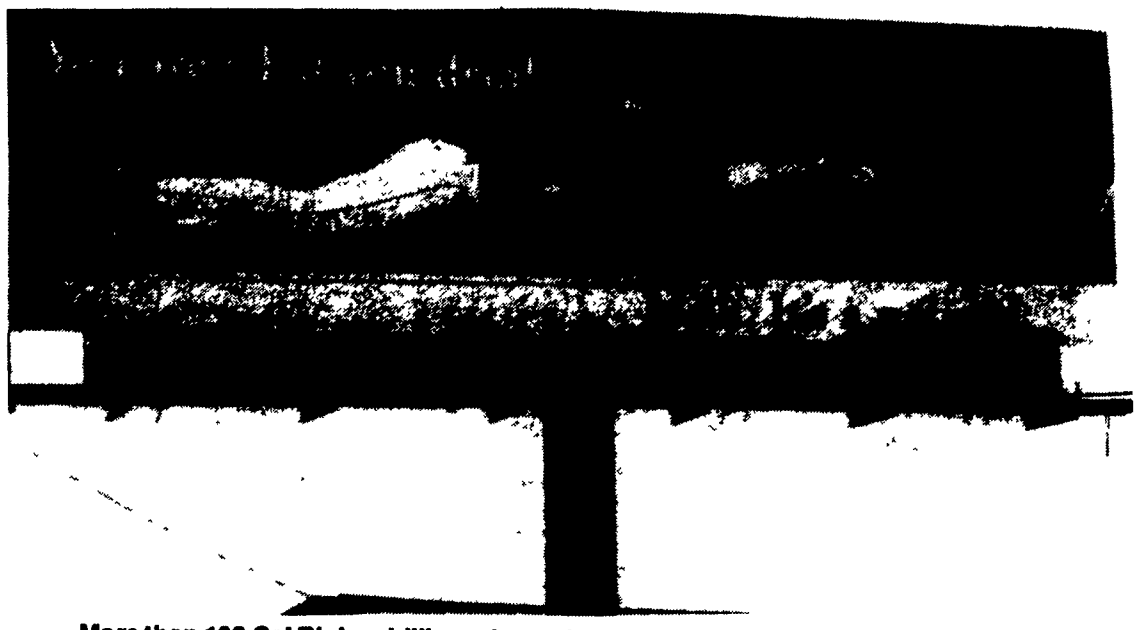
While Mike has bid and bartered to amass most of his collection, some of it he literally stumbled onto. While he was at the landfill one day several years ago, taking in paper for recycling, he tripped over a cardboard box. Kicking the heavy box out of his way, he noticed papers spilling out of it. "I looked down and I said, 'Hey, that's an old sale catalog!' So I started picking up all these catalogs," Mike related, "Anyway, I found five or six boxes. I said 'Can I have these?" and the guy said 'Anyone can take stuff out of here, it's just recycled' so I found five or six boxes from the '30s, '40s and '50s."

In this case, one man's trash was another man's treasure. Those five or six boxes had belonged to a family that had bred Jersey cows. In one to the boxes Mike found a St. Louis Exposition book for Jerseys from 1906. In another box was a copy of "The Island Cow", a publication from Jersey, Channel Islands, where Jersey cows come from, dated April 1930. The magazine, at 33 pages, had advertisements for bulls, and depicted the ideal type Jersey cow.

While his dairy collectibles bring Mike a great deal of pleasure, the prices some of the things go for now have reined in his collecting somewhat. He says he cannot justify paying the price some of the items are bringing at sales these days. "If I'd started about 10 years ago, I'd have oodles of bottles. But I wouldn't even buy them when they cost $3." he explained.

He says the collectibles are worth whatever someone will pay for them. But for him, their true value is in the pleasure of having the objects and learning about their history.

While Mike has bid and bartered to amass most of his collection, some of its he literally stumbled onto. This 1930 publication, "The Island Cow", from Jersey in the Channel Islands, was in a box Mike tripped over while at the recycling center. Someone had discarded the items, and they found a new home in Mike's collection.



More than 100 Cal Ripken billboards can be seen throughout the Mid-Atlantic market. The Baltimore Orioles player is the celebrity spokesperson for the new "Milk—It's A Natural" campaign. Iron Man Cal, a lifetime milk drinker, shows people that you are what you drink. Additional "got milk?" billboards, bulletins, television and radio spots will compliment the milk campaign.

Farm Women Societies

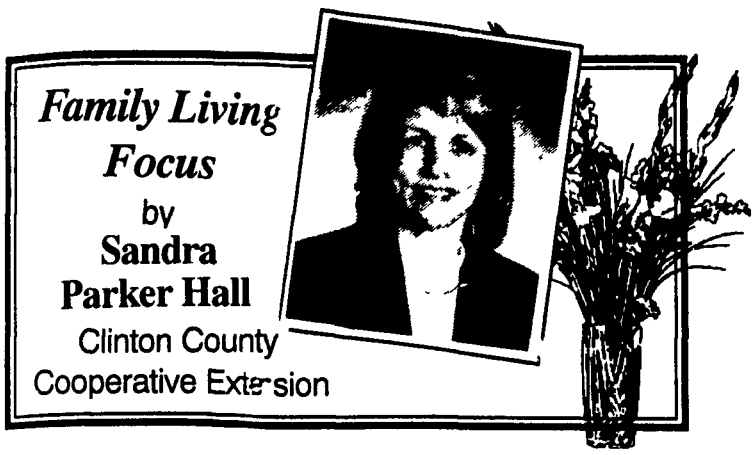
Berks Society 6

Berks County Farm Women Group #6 held its June meeting in the home of Linda Youse. Nine members enjoyed a skit performed by Berks County Dairy Princess Alicia Gross.

The county project, "Acts of Kindness" was discussed.

Monetary donations were given to the Memorial Fund for member Sallie Hauseman and the mother of member Marian Gehis.

The July meeting and group picnic will be at the home of Mary Jane Hetrick.



It's Time to Get Moving!

What kind of shape are you in?

Can you do the same things you did as a teenager and not be out of breath?

Some of us can and some of us need rest and oxygen before we can go any further. Our lifestyles vary, but we all need physical activity at every stage of life. According to a report from the Surgeon General moderate physical exercise can lead to a longer, healthier life.

Regular physical activity is an important tool that can help prevent or reduce the risks of some of the leading causes of illness and death in the United States. These include heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure, and colon cancer. Physical activity has also been shown to reduce feelings of depression and anxiety, help control weight, help build and maintain healthy bones, muscles and joints. Staying physically active helps us stay strong and better able to move without falling.

Unfortunately, most of us don't get enough exercise Consider these facts:

- Sixty percent of American adults do not exercise on a regular basis.
- Twenty-five percent of adults are not active at all.
- Nearly half of the young people ages 12 to 21 are not vigorously active on a regular basis.
- Inactivity increases with age and is more common among women than among men.

As more of us go to work at sedentary jobs and spend leisure time channel surfing, getting enough physical activity becomes a bigger problem

Exercise can come in many forms and it doesn't have to be strenuous to improve our health. Individuals of all ages can benefit from a moderate amount of physical activity. You can improve your health whether you exercise in longer sessions of moderately intense activity (such as 30 minutes of brisk walking) or in shorter sessions of more strenuous activity (such as 15 to 20 minutes of jogging). Of course, you can get even greater health benefits if you increase your level of physical activity. Be careful not to overdo it. If you have been inactive for a while, check with your doctor before taking up a new exercise.

If you are planning to start a new activity program, keep the following in mind.

- Always talk to your doctor before beginning any exercise program. If you have a chronic health problem, such as hypertension, heart disease, diabetes, obesity or if you are at risk for any of these diseases, it is especially important that you speak with your doctor before beginning.
- Men over age 40 and women over age 50 should visit their doctor and get checked for heart disease before beginning a program of vigorous activity.
- If you are sedentary and want to begin exercising, start with short sessions of five to ten minutes and gradually build up to longer sessions.
- Remember the best way to stick to an exercise program is by making it fun. Try a variety of activities, and include family and friends in your plans

Finally, don't be discouraged. Whether we realize it or not we are often exercising when doing jobs or chores around the home. Some examples of moderate exercise follow:

- washing windows or floors for 45 to 60 minutes
- gardening for 30 to 45 minutes
- wheeling yourself in a wheelchair for 30 to 40 minutes
- walking two miles in 40 minutes
- running 1 1/2 miles in 15 minutes
- bicycling five miles in 30 minutes
- pushing a stroller 1 1/2 miles in 30 minutes
- raking leaves for 30 minutes
- shoveling snow for 15 minutes
- swimming laps for 20 minutes

How many similar activities do you do? Give yourself a pat on the back and be sure to keep moving.

Total Milk Sales Exceed Projection

PITTSBURGH — Since the dairy checkoff began in 1984, America's dairy farmers have sold approximately 200 billion more pounds of total milk that the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) projected for sales without the checkoff, according to recently released USDA figures.

Cindy Weimer, spokesperson of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP) says dairy consumption has risen in part because dairy farmers agreed to fund a nationwide generic promotion program. But, Weimer cautions, the key to continued success in expanding dairy sales is moving away from addressing consumers "generically." It takes precision marketing that targets specific consumers and coordinates promotion efforts to grow sales today.

Part of that precision comes from a highly integrated, unified effort. "National, state and regional dairy organizations and others in the dairy industry are working together in unprecedented ways on unified research, development and promotion to deliver the right products, packages and messages to consumers," says Weimer.

In addition, extensive research was done to ensure that checkoff dollars are used effectively and efficiently to deliver appropriate promotion messages to the right consumer audiences, Weimer said. The most extensive consumer study in dairy's history revealed two market segments with the most potential for growth — young milk drinkers and certain cheese customers.

Dairy farmer-funded promotions reaching young milk drinkers and consumers who cook with cheese or simply crave cheese are being coordinated at all levels — national, state and regional. "We know our marketing efforts have much more impact if we are all speaking with one clear voice and reaching our consumers repeatedly with consistent messages," Weimer says.

The dairy checkoff is working hand-in-hand with dairy processor-funded promotions. By meshing the dairy farmer-funded "got milk®" marketing campaign, which targets children, with the Milk Processor Education Program (MilkPEP) "milk mustache" campaign, aimed at teens and adults, all target audiences are reached more effectively, Weimer says.

This coordination puts a record $181 million into the 1998 campaign alone, with the ultimate goal of increasing fluid milk consumption by 4%, or 2.2 billion pounds by the year 2000.

The increased efficiencies of joining forces on fluid milk allowed an additional $21 million to be earmarked for the new "Behold the power of Cheese™" campaign. This provided a substantial 40% increase in national farmer-funded cheese marketing efforts. The goal is an increase in annual cheese consumption from the current 28.6 pounds to 31 pounds per person by the year 2000.

In addition to precision marketing efforts, even the research at all six national dairy centers is fine tuned and results are focused on projects that will encourage Americans to consume more dairy and dairy-based products

"Our farmer-funded research plan is designed to meet the needs of consumers and help the food industry in order to build demand," Weimer says "We're working on projects that will have the greatest marketplace impact, such as developing new milk-based beverages and improving the taste and texture of reduced-fat cheeses"

Research findings also are used in dairy farmer-funded education programs, which promote the importance of dairy as the preferred source of calcium in American diets Recent results continue to emphasize the role of dairy in preventing osteoporosis and indicate that dairy products may play a role in reducing hypertension

"Clearly, the checkoff is working to increase demand for dairy products," says Weimer "But the checkoff program can — and will — work even better. By precision targeting consumers and coordinating the dairy industry's research, development and promotion programs, we hope to increase dairy sales at an even faster rate."

Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program contracts with the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East to work closely with Dairy Management Inc. ™, the national check planning and management organization, to implement diary promotion and research programs nationwide ADADC MidEast is the local planning and management organization, funded by dairy farmer dollars, responsible for increasing demand for U.S produced dairy products on behalf of America's dairy farmers

Precautions Can Deliver Homeowners From Flies

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co) – If you think your house is plagued with flies this year, consider this If a pair of houseflies began mating on the first day of summer and every member of every generation of offspring survived and reproduced at the maximum rate, the resulting fly population would cover the Earth three feet deep by the first day of fall!

So Charles Pitts, professor of entomology in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, Pitts, an expert on livestock pests, says that flies seem to be getting worse in the eastern United States.

Pitts explains that the life cycle of a house fly is perfectly suited for life as a summer pest. "Their cycle is temperature-driven," he says. "The warmer it is, the shorter the time it takes for the fly to develop. In the summer, a new generation can develop every 10 days."

Each female fly lays about 300 eggs, half of which will be female. "If conditions are right, a fly population can explode rapidly," Pitts says. Flies also can survive the winter in all stages of development In fact, flies continue to develop during winter although at a much slower rate

Certain flies can become active in homes during winter, if there is a warm-temperature breeding area around the house "This can occur if the homeowners has horses or other animals near the house," he says.

For example, the cluster fly and the face fly will seek winter shelter in houses as adults. The cluster fly is a particular nuisance in fall, when large groups of the insects seek out homes to wait out the winter. "They usually stay in the attic, but these flies will come down into the house if it gets too cold," Pitts says.

Pitts says the best way homeowners can combat flies is to make the outside of your house as inhospitable as possible

Compost piles must be properly managed "Some people throw stuff in the backyard and call it a compost pile," Pitts says. "Compost piles must be turned and tended to prevent insects from being a nuisance."

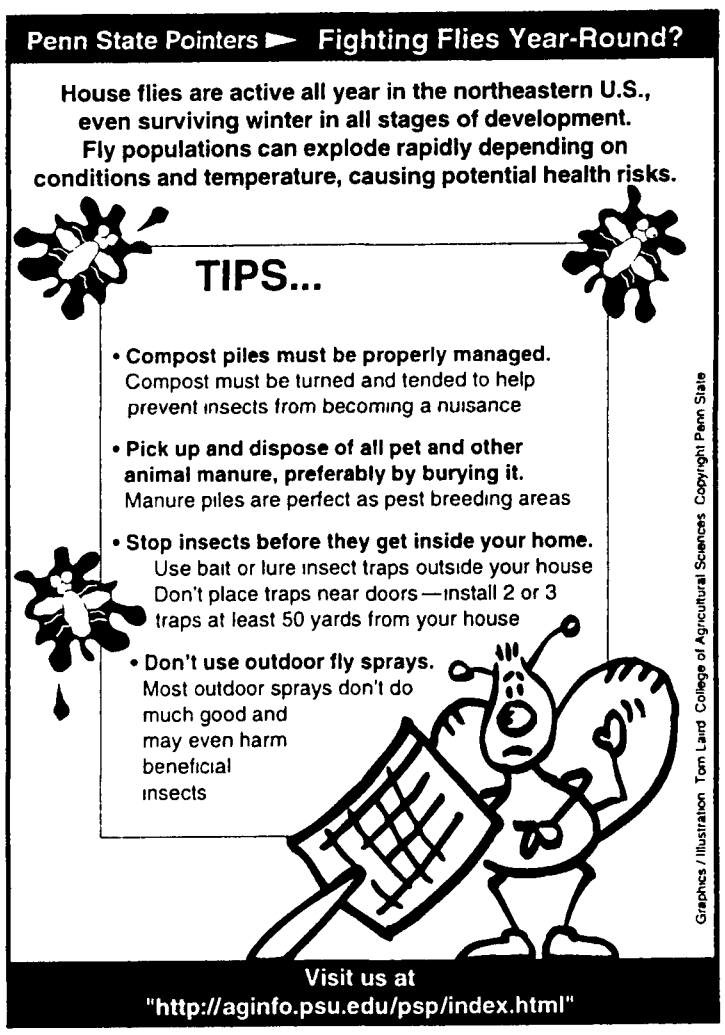
Pick up all pet manure and dispose of it, preferably by buying it. "Manure piles are the perfect breeding grounds for flies," Pitts says.

Hardware stores and farm-supply stores sell traps equipped with bait to lure flies "Don't put these near a door," Pitts warns. "I recommend placing two or three in a semi circle at least 50 yards away from the house."

Don't use an outdoor fly spray. "Most of the time outdoor sprays don't do much good," Pitts says.

Once the flies are indoors, Pitts says you are left to the tried-and-true methods of elimination flyswatters and sticky fly strips still work as well as they did for grandma. If homeowners opt for indoor sprays, Pitts urges savvy shoppers to check the label

"Indoor spray labels should say 'For flies and insects' and list natural pyrethrins as an ingredient. Natural pyrethrins come from the chrysanthemum plant and are safe to use indoors," Pitts says. "If the label reads 'Pyrethroid' compounds, the spray shouldn't be used inside."



Penn State Pointers ► Fighting Flies Year-Round?
House flies are active all year in the northeastern U.S., even surviving winter in all stages of development. Fly populations can explode rapidly depending on conditions and temperature, causing potential health risks.
TIPS...
• Compost piles must be properly managed. Compost must be turned and tended to help prevent insects from becoming a nuisance
• Pick up and dispose of all pet and other animal manure, preferably by burying it. Manure piles are perfect as pest breeding areas
• Stop insects before they get inside your home. Use bait or lure insect traps outside your house Don't place traps near doors—install 2 or 3 traps at least 50 yards from your house
• Don't use outdoor fly sprays. Most outdoor sprays don't do much good and may even harm beneficial insects

See What Park Offers

YORK (YORK CO.) – A celebration of diversity both in facilities and programs is what the York County Department of Parks and Recreation's "30 days for 30 years" celebration is all about. Whatever your interests are, York County Parks have something, a place and a program, for you.

The park system was created in 1968, when a number of farsighted community leaders joined forces to create the first park board

Today the Department of Parks and Recreation operates eight county parks, 4,000 acres of public land, that range from wild, pristine Apollo County Park, near New Bridgeville, in the Susquehanna River hills, to Jacobus' Nixon County Park, with its Nature Center that hosts over 35,000 people annually.

To celebrate the accomplishments of the last 30 years, and to show just how diverse the parks have become, 30 days, from July 21 through August 22 has been set aside by the Parks for a special month-long celebration

During these five weeks, the Park system will put on its best and show off a little bit, with programming that reveals how diverse the system has become

The first week of the 30 days includes the following activities

•July 21 Insects are the focus of two talks at Nixon County Park's Nature Center, Rick Mikula will host an insect workshop from 2 p.m. to 4 p m Pre-registration is required call (717) 428-1961 From 6:30 p m to 8:30 p m , a butterfly presentation will take place

•July 22 Rudy County Park will host a BMX demonstration and test ride from 6.30 - 8:30 p.m at the BMX track located there Also, Rocky Ridge County Park will host a mountain bike clinic beginning at 5.30 p.m. Meet at Rocky Ridge's front parking lot

•July 23 Parks Advisory board member Dave Wildasin will lead a Nature Walk from 8.30 a m - 10 a.m at Spring Valley County Park Pre-registration is required, call (717) 428-1961 In the evening, from 6 p m -8 30 p.m., Raab County Park, an 1800's iron mine that produced some of the best iron ore available at the time–it also has two bat caves with four species of bats will be the focus of an exploration for the more adventurous public.

•July 24 Rudy County Park will be the setting for a star watch and bonfire The Campfire Tales program (a bonfire complete with storytellers) is for kids ages four to eight This take place at the parking lot from 7 30 p m - 9 30 p m At 9 p m , a public star watch will takes place in Rudy County Park's observatory.

•July 25 Two events are planned for this first Saturday· a 9 a.m tour of the seasonal Volksmarch trail in Nixon and Kain county parks, and gold panning in Spring Valley County Park

Prospectors can meet at the crossroads (Potosi Road) parking area at 9 a m for the gold panning session The Volksmarch trail tour will meet with Shirley Truax at Nixon County Park's Nature Center at 9 a m

Emotional Responses To Disaster

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — As we have become all too familiar with, natural disasters can strike anywhere and anytime. With clean up, insurances, and the overall effort needed to begin the recovery process, we often forget the emotional toll such situations can take on the victims, the volunteers, and the communities.

Following are some suggestions to help remind us of the importance of coping.

There are two reactions during a disaster. Most people are very quick to take care of what needs to be done. sandbagging, packing, cleaning up, helping neighbors

At the same time people experience disbelief. "This can't possibly be happening!"

This emotional disbelief allows people to keep working on survival, but there may also be a sense of unreality during the disaster. Other powerful feelings may surface. Panic/feeling out of control anger, generosity toward others, despair, anxiety/uncertainty, disorientation, cooperation/team work

At times, people experience a real sense of community and connectedness when everyone pulls together to deal with the situation The sharing of loss with others can create a strong bond among disaster victims Often the full force of the emotional reaction hits well after the initial shock and clean up efforts. That's when exhaustion can set in As we look at our real losses, we may experience grief, desperation and depression We need to be prepared to pay more attention to our emotion reactions and to the reactions of our friends and neighbors once the emergency crews go home.

Coping

One of the first things people can do is pull together. Don't hesitate to ask for assistance There are many people around who want to help and will help. They just need to know what to do that will be most helpful right now. People want to help, yet some people try to manage by themselves, without accepting help. Remember, help from others may make the critical difference between coping and suffering more from a disaster. Allow other people to help you!

Another important coping strategy is taking care of your physical and emotional needs. Eat a balanced diet to fuel your energy. As much as possible, get enough sleep. Fatigue will slow you down during an emergency. As your prepare for clean up from a disaster, talk with others about your feelings. Listen to theirs Together, look for the positives in the situation, and hope for the future

How family members can be more supportive of one another

• Tell family members when they have done a good job

• Laugh! Laughter can help relieve the tension.

• Be considerate of other family members

• Express love and concern often

Helping Others

As much as possible, provide practical help during the disaster Help friends or family pack Furnish meals Store their belongings; provide them with a place to stay Parents may be very busy; offer to spend some time with the children to play and listen to their concerns.

Listen When others talk about, their experience and feelings, their emotional load seems lighter to bear. One of the best ways you can help is just to listen. You don't have to come up with solutions or answers.

It's OK if your neighbor needs to break down and cry Others will ask "Why me?" They are not really looking for an answer but expressing their hurt.

Show by words and actions that you care. A friendly arm around troubled shoulders or a few words of support and encouragement can help in times of crisis. Small, kind deeds and sincere expressions of affection or admiration also will mean a lot.

About Children

Disasters bring stress to the whole family including children Such crises can be extremely threatening for them. These tips can help your child cope during disaster

• Heed public safety warnings Quick actions may avert many difficulties for the whole family

• Tell children what's going on simply and matter-of-factly This helps avoid fear of the unknown.

• Listen Answer their questions as much as you can.

• Reassure them. Use statements like "It's scary right now, but we'll always take care of you"

• Involve children. Let them help within their ability. This helps them fell a part of the family and prepares them for later situations.

• As much as possible, keep routines They help children feel secure.

• Show love and support.

• Make sure children know the family's difficulties are not their fault. Children tend to blame themselves for problems.

• Keep your sense of humor and enjoy a good laugh together frequently.

• Take care of your own emotions and stress. Children will reflect your anxiety or your calm.

During crises, children may act younger than they are A child may be irritable or misbehave This is normal for a child who is scared and doesn't understand a situation as serious as a disaster. Children need your extra patience at this time.

"Neighboring" in times of trouble

1. Offer specific types of help or ask how you can help.

2 Go ahead and act Don't be afraid of saying or doing the wrong thing

3 Go ahead and help

4 Keep helping Recovering can take a long time Your friends or family members will need regular, small acts of kindness to maintain their morale and to put their lives back together

Pool Safety

NEWARK, Del – More than 1,000 drownings and 75,000 pool-related injuries occur each year in the United States Over half of these reported incidents take place int he five million residential swimming pools nationwide, making pool ownership a significant responsibility.

"Prevention is key," says Ron Jester, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension safety specialist. "Lean how to swim, how to rescue others and be knowledgeable about basic safety rules..

Take precautions to reduce the risk of the top three swimming-related accidents; falling on slippery surfaces, striking the bottom or sides of the pool while diving because of insufficient depth, and drowning when swimming alone or without adult supervision

Some of the most severe permanent injuries are the result of diving into shallow water Using diving boards and slides with extreme caution and constant supervision Safe diving requires a minimum water depth of 8 1/2 feet Prohibit diving altogether in above-ground pools. Clearly mark water depth on the pool deck and use a safety float line to indicate a change in depth to keep swimmers aware of their surroundings

Accidents occurring on the pool deck can be just as serious as those in the water Minimize tripping hazards by keeping a tidy deck, free of scattered toys and pool equipment Non-slip materials on the pool deck, diving boards and ladders also are essential in safeguarding against injuries

Secure your pool from wandering children and uninvited guests by fencing around all four sides of the pool. It is preferable not to use the house as part of the barrier, especially when small children reside in the home. Gates should be self-closing and secured with a lock.

When the leaves begin to fall and it's time to pull out the pool cover, don't let your guard down. Pool covers can be a serious drowning hazard and should not replace the security of a fence. Children or pets may attempt to cross a covered pool, putting themselves, as well as those who come to their aid, at great risk for drowning. Be sure to keep pool covers clear of excess water that may collect on top.

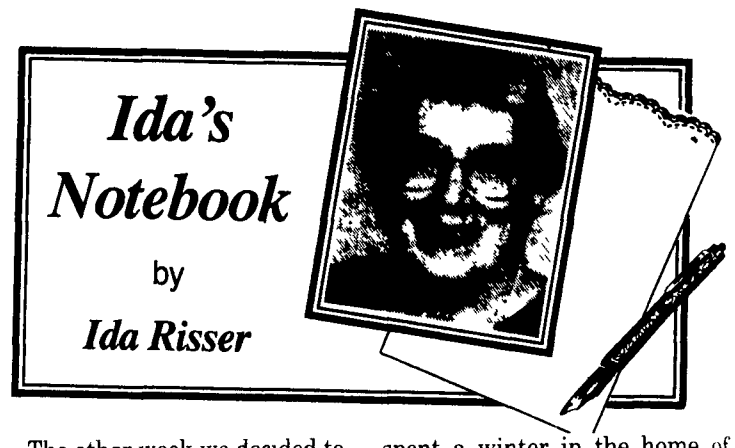
The pool and surrounding area should be sufficiently lit for easy visibility at night Keep appliances, such as televisions and radios, out of the vicinity Lock away pool chemicals in a dry storage area

All electrical pool equipment should comply with local and federal codes Use only laboratory-recognized equipment installed in accordance with the National Electrical Code Article 680 Check the code for types of electrical equipment requiring a ground fault circuit interrupter (GFCI)

Essential elements in pool safety basic first aid, rescue equipment and a phone should be accessible at all times

A safe pool area requires substantial and constant attention Jester urges vigilance when watching swimming children and enforcing safety rules

"By establishing and following safety procedures for your swimming pool," says Jester, "needless injuries and fatalities will be prevented."



The other week we decided to attend our oldest grandson's graduation from high school in New Jersey. We were invited for lunch and arrived with vegetables from our garden and four kinds of berries. I played basketball with the seven-year-old grandson, but he did not like my method of throwing hoops. You see, I threw underhand instead of the regular way

Everything was fine until evening, after we dressed for the occasion, we learned that the ceremony would be held inside and there were only two tickets for the parents If it had been outside, we could have used the five tickets As David was salutatorian, he gave a speech, but we missed hearing it

However, our daughter did take us on a historical tour She drove us to Morristown, New Jersey where George Washington spent a winter in the home of Mrs. Jacob Ford, Jr She shared her home with General Washington and it became his headquarters

That winter, 1779-80, one of the biggest problems was finding enough food for the encampment of 10,000 soldiers at Jockey Hollow a few miles away The state government and the Continental Congress were needed to clothe and feed the army as more than 20 snowstorms blasted the log cabins

A museum has been built near the Ford house It showcases soldier's clothes and guns Also shown here are leather-covered trunks and wooden canteens.

We had a few days away from home and even managed to visit my husband's bother in Berks County But, our work was still waiting for us when we got home

Song Birds Are Dying

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) – In mid-April, many bird watchers in Pennsylvania noticed that gold finches and pine siskins sometimes appeared tame and were easily approachable. These birds soon died near feeders. In the State College area, one individual reported more than 30 birds dead They were not eating, feathers were ruffled and they were very listless. As confirmed by the Animal Diagnostic Laboratory at Penn State University, the cause was salmonellosis.

Fifteen states reported higher than normal songbird mortality this spring and in 13 states salmonellosis was confirmed as the cause The disease is often linked to feeders, especially large artificial feeding sites with a high concentration of birds. The bacteria transmits through fecal matter and contaminated food. The primary species effected were American gold finch, pine siskin, and common redpoll.

There is no successful treatment for the disease. It is uncommon to have so many eastern states effected, the disease is more widespread in the western United States. The cause for the eastern outbreak is unclear.

Prevention is the best medicine to avert the spread of Salmonellosis Disinfect your feeders on a regular basis. Clean up food spillage and remove old food in and from underneath feeders. Buy feeders that have smooth edges which are easy to clean Clean and disinfect wooden platform feeders on a more frequent schedule. Set up several feeders and space them throughout your yard. If you notice sick birds around your feeder clean, disinfect and move it to a new location. The National Wildlife Health Center, 6006 Schroeder Road, Madison, WI 53711 has a brochure entitled "Coping With Disease at Bird Feeders". The publication contains good information on songbird diseases and ways to prevent their spread.

Salmonellosis has the potential to affect humans however, transmission by songbirds does not pose a significant health risk to people. After handling feeders or sick birds wash hands with warm, soapy water. According to the Southeast Cooperative Disease Study, simple sanitation practices can protect the birds at your feeders, as well as your personal health

Halter Champion Is Creme Brulee

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) – The halter division is proving popular for attendees of the Triangle Series horse shows.

In halter, horses and ponies are judged primarily on their confirmation (looks), although ring manners are also considered in judging. Horses and ponies age 3 or younger compete in this division.

At the June 14 show held at KA Equestrian Center, Cochranville, the Halter Champion was Creme Brulee, shown by Lisa Thompson of Gap. Reserve champion was Marshall Law, shown by Alicia DelDuco of Catamount Road, Oxford.

(Three farms comprise the "triangle" - KA Equestrian Center, Grazing Acres Farm in New London, and Fox Meadow in Unionville). Championships and reserves in each division are presented at each show, in addition to end-of-series high point awards. The next series show is scheduled for Sunday, July 12, at Grazing Acres.

Call any of the participating farms for information and/or prize lists for future shows: Grazing Acres (610) 225-5009; KA Equestrian: (610) 869-0746; Fox Meadow; (610) 444-8805.

Winning two championships each on June 14 were Andrea Heinzman of Elkview, Jessica Know of Unionville, and Alicia Boyle of New London.

Heinzman rode her Arabian, Quintessa, to a championship in the mini stirrup division (for riders 10 and under), and then moved up to also win the short stirrup championship for riders aged 12 and under.

Jessica Knox on Star won the open equitation championship (for riders age 13 or older), and the championship of the low hunter division. The pair were also the reserve champions of the hunter divisions.

Alicia Boyle, a Western rider, won championships in the western and the pleasure divisions with Desert Bold Fire, an Arabian owned by Dawn McCuen of Cochranville.

Leadline champion was Heather Mackenzie riding Lady Ashleigh. Reserve champion was Kate Greig, Christiana, riding Tabatha.

Mini mini champion was Nina Shaffer of Audrey Lynn Dr., Coatesville, riding Superboy. Reserve was Brooke Holloway riding Wyndom, who survived a ride-off for reserve against Shawna Simmons of Christiana riding Tabatha.

Beginner over fences champion was Bethany Moore of Landenberg on Mardi Gras. Reserve was Sara Schaefer, Lincoln University, on Fudge.

Baby green champion was Oreo ridden by Leah Moorhead of Wilson Mill Rd., Oxford. Oreo was also reserve champion in the low hunter division. Reserve in the baby green division went to Hard Hearted Hanna, ridden by Adrian Farrar of Newark, Del.

Hunter champion was Acclaim to Fame, owned by Diane Ray of Oxford and ridden by Meg Shortlidge of Nova Lane, West Grove. Shortlidge was also the reserve champion of the open equitation division, this time on Kaluvi Firasha.

Reserve champion in the mini stirrup division was Rachel Lowe of Nottingham riding WBF Kashim.

Reserve in the short stirrup division was Jennifer Haines of Boothwyn, riding Sidekick. Country Velvet, ridden by Janet Johnson of Coatesville, was reserve champion western horse. Reserve pleasure champion was Ginger with Leslie McFadien of Oxford.

4-H Camp

Adams and Franklin County 4-H members wished they were ducks at the 1998 4-H Camp held June 9 - June 12 at Camp Eder in Fairfield.

Approximately 60 4-H members attended camp to enjoy the numerous activities that helped them go "back in time " Just the beginning of the fun was staying in covered wagons at the camp, which is a part of the camp's atmosphere

Workshops include weaving baskets lead by Sharon Baker, 4-H volunteer by Jeanne Plotica, Adams County extension agent and 4-H coordinator; hose play lead by Darlene Resh, Adams County 4-H extension agent; outdoor cooking lead by Karen Wenger, Franklin County 4-H assistant; recreation, lead by Tia Crider, Franklin County 4-H summer assistant; and learning and trees, led by George Hurd, extension agent - environment/resource development.

The 4-H Campers also participated in swimming, crafts, recreation, and movies during their free time every day In the evenings they participated in mixers on Tuesday, a civil war reenactor program by James Dilts and Bob Klokis on Wednesday, and ghosts stories told by storyteller Ann Griffith on Thursday.

On Friday, the 4-H Campers chose two intensive workshops to fill their morning hours. The intensive workshops offered include a GPU demonstration by Sharon Ullman, GPU; water quality demonstration by Tom McCarty, multi county water quality extension agent; first aid demonstration by Holly Cookerly, Gettysburg Hospital; Fizz and Fuzz workshop presented by Linda Spahr, extension agent from York County; plants workshop by Ann Bonson, a Franklin County master gardener; Series science in your sink workshop by Abe Bucher, an Adams County 4-H volunteer; and 4-H promotion workshop by Jenna Molino, Adams County 4-H Summer Program Assistant

Darlene Resh, 4-H extension agent from Adams County and camp director, says this year's camp was the best one in a few years and that it will be hard to top it.

The kids stayed in good spirits all week, despite the wet and cold weather. Of the 60 campers at this year's 4-H Camp, 38 campers attended from Adams County. In attendance were Tara and Kylee Cassatt and Kirsten Buckley, Abbottstown, Jacob Gantz, Lee and Carl Wilkinson, and Sara Myers, Aspers; Kyle Tuckey, Megan Cole, Amy Flickinger, Katy and Brian Baldwin, Biglerville Summer Chronister, Dillsburg; Amber Grimm and Megan Weigand, East Berlin, Charlotte Battersby, Fairfield; Amanda Starner, Gardners; Nathan Lawver, Amanda Clowney, Will and Melanie Kammerer, Zach Nell, and Raquel Clymer, Gettysburg; Bryan and Benjamin Neiderer, Hanover; Dan Bolt, Clayton Wood, Daniele and Michael Paredes, Littlestown; Holly Hetrick, McKnightstown; Yvonne Staub and Lauren Porter, McSherrystown; Mark Mummert and Justin Hentz, New Oxford; Andy Bosley and Wendy Wood, Orrtanna; and Erin Trcka and Ronnie Hills, York Springs.

Counselors served as workshop assistants and group leaders. The counselors from Adams County were Jason Keller, Gettysburg; B. J. Wagner, Gettsyburg; Janel Keller, Gettysburg; Rachel Fox, Gettysburg; Jessica Coleman, Gettysburg, Jessi Leister, Gettysburg, John Myers, Aspers; Jonathan Murren, New Oxford; Tiffany Staub, McSherrystown, Cami Topper, East Berlin; Emily Black, Aspers; Adam Sachs, Gettysburg; Becky Bolt, Littlestown; and Chad Funt, Arendtsville.

For More information about the 4-H program, contact Jeanne Plotica or Darlene Resh at the Adams County Extension Office at (717) 334-6271 or 624-4525.

Born To Show 4-H Club Meeting

A meeting of the Born to Show Dairy Club was held June 20 at the Mack's farm. Roundup will be on July 31-August 1 at the Harford Fairgrounds.

Deadline for permission slips is July 28. Most members are attending districts at Troy.

Entry cards are due by July 17 to attend districts on Aug. 17 at Tioga. Members are reminded to work on project books and bring them to the next meeting.

The club is buying a sweatshirt for each member with a cow and "Born to Show Dairy Club" written on the back. The next meeting is July 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Montrose Presbyterian Church.

Hans Herr House Sets Heritage Day

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) – The Hans Herr House will hold its 19th annual Heritage on August 1, from 9 am, until 4 pm. This fun-filled farm festival features demonstrations of farm life and activities from the 18th century to the early 20th.

This year's theme is early food preparation, and the work involved in getting food from the field to the table. Threshing, flailing, and corn shelling will be demonstrated, and visitors will be able to see a smokehouse, outdoor bake oven, and Pennsylvania German raised hearth in operation, and to sample goodies from these sites. More modern fare is available at concession stands, such as roasted corn, rhubarb punch; homemade root beer, hot dogs, pie, and ice cream.

Other demonstrations at Heritage Day include soapmaking, blacksmithing, paper making, linen processing, bobbin lace, scherenschnitte, and wool spinning. There are also children's activities, and various scheduled workshops on 18th century hymn singing and colonial clothing.

Admission to Heritage Days is $5 for adults, 1 for children ages 7-12, 6 and under are free.

The Hans Herr House is located at 1849 Hans Herr Drive, Willow Street, PA 5 miles south of Lancaster off Rts. US 222 and PA 741 between the villages of Willow Street and Lampeter. For more information call (717) 464-4438.

You ask You answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

QUESTION — Walter Breen, Lancaster, would like to know where to purchase the type of Japanese beetle trap where a mason jar screws on to the bottom part of the yellow plastic vanes, which eliminates the use of bugs.

We deliver peace of mind with every GENESIS™ tractor

NEW HOLLAND

Buying or leasing a GENESIS™ tractor from New Holland is virtually risk-free.

- GUARANTEED trade-in value with no-risk leases
- The best warranty – 3 years, 3,000 hours, no deductible
- The best performance – the best lugging ability, the best fuel economy, the smoothest powershift and more!
- The best dealer service and support

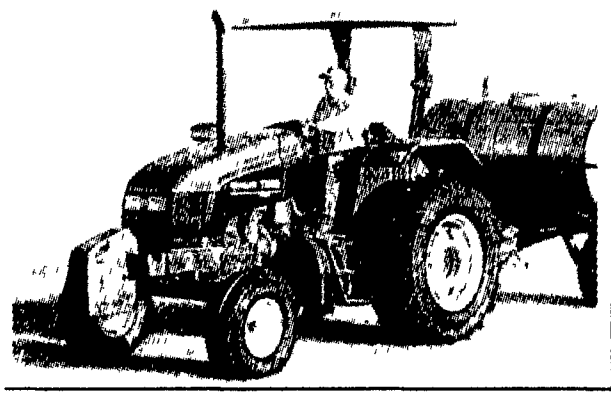
Stop in for a test drive. We deliver peace of mind with every GENESIS™ tractor.

Excellent in the field - and on the farm

New Holland 70- to 90-PTO-hp tractors feature a 16x16 Pulse Command™ transmission with push-button power shifting within each of four speed groups. Speeds are evenly spaced 18% apart, with nine speeds in the usual two- to seven-mph working range. Plenty of gear overlap makes range shifting unnecessary most of the time.

The shuttle lets you pull out from a dead stop or change direction without clutching An optional, electro-hydraulically engaged creeper is also available

NEW HOLLAND



Shuttle back and forth with ease

The left-hand, column-mounted shuttle control on New Holland 40 to 62 PTO hp tractors with 8x8 and 16x8 transmissions provides convenient shifting of the best, fully-synchronized shuttle in this horsepower class. Shuttling is controlled with the left hand, leaving your right hand free to operate the loader.

Great looks. Aggressive power.

New Holland 35 Series tractors really "work big" in the field or on the job.

- Engines have good lugging ability with 1000 useful rpm's between maximum torque and maximum power
- 14.5 gpm hydraulic flow assures fast implement response
- 3-point lift system, activated by touch control, is best-in class
- Electro-hydraulic differential lock provides maximum traction when needed.

Young Named Head Of Penn State's Agricultural And Biological Engineer Department

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co) – Roy Young, professor of agricultural and biological engineering at Clemson University since 1984, has been named professor and head of the Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering in the College of Agricultural Sciences, effective July 1

"Dr Young comes to Penn State with superb credentials as a scholar and engineer," said Dean Robert Steele "His experience spanning the industry sector to the academic sector provides him with the ideal background to take this important leadership position in the college "

At Clemson, Young taught three undergraduate courses and a graduate course on systems engineering His research focuses on the mechanization of plant micropropagation He also has researched liquid and plastic film color filters as greenhouse covers for the control of plant morphology

His work has resulted in five patents, including three for automated systems for plant propagation His most recent patent, which automates the process by which plant tissue cultures are transformed from the laboratory to greenhouses and also helps acclimate the plant to its new environment, has been commercially developed by Southern Sun Propagation Systems Inc , in Hodges, S C The commercial name for the system is the Acclimatron.

Young has extensive academic and industrial experience. Before coming to Clemson, he worked from 1978 to 1984 as a section manager of horticultural engineering in the Silvicultural Engineering Department of the Weyerhaeuser Company in Tacoma, Wash. At Weyerhaeuser, he directed the research and development of mechanized equipment to handle ornamental plants in greenhouses and containers nurseries. He also was an assistant professor agricultural engineering at Auburn University from 1972 to 1978. At Auburn, he studied vehicle guidance and controlled traffic to reduce soil compaction.

In addition, Young worked as a research engineer at North Carolina State University in the summer of 1970, and was a scientific guest at the Max-Plank Institute in Bad Kreuznach, Germany, in the summer of 1969

Young earned his bachelor's in biological and agricultural engineering from North Carolina State University in 1966, returning to the university for his doctorate in biological and agricultural engineering, wich he earned in 1972 He received his masters in agricultural engineering from Iowa State University in 1968 and has been a registered professional engineer since 1976.

Young was named a Fellow of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE) in 1994. Among his numerous other honors are the ASAE President's Citation in 1989 and ASAE Technical Paper Awards in 1986 and 1995. He also has published more than 40 articles in such professional journals as Agricultural Engineering American Nurseryman, HortScience, and the Journal of Environmental Horticulture.

He is a member of several professional societies, including the American Society of Agricultural Engineers. American Society of Engineering Educators, the Institute of Biological Engineering and the Council for Agriculture Science and Technology. He has served on may state, regional and national committees for ASAE as well. He is a member of the editorial board for the Journal of Environmental Horticulture and is an associate editor for emerging areas division of ASAE.

He also is a member of many professional organizations, including Sigma Xi, Gamma Sigma Delta, Phi Eta Sigma, Phi Kapps Phi and Alpha Zeta.

Young's wife, Ann, has worked as a laboratory technician and a computer education teacher. The couple has two sons, Adam, a graduate student in art history at the University of Pittsburgh; Hugh, who will be a freshman at Penn State this year; and Andrea, who will enter high school this year.

BUSINESS ◆ NEWS

Mattilio Named Vice President At First Union

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) - First Union National Bank has announced that John J. Mattilio, of Columbia, has been named vice president in the agri-finance department.

Mattilio manages an $95 million loan portfolio of 230 farm and agri-business customers throughout Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Prior to joining the former CoreStates Bank in 1993 as a relationship manager in the agri-finance department, Mattilio worked as a relationship manager for the Farm Credit System.

Mattilio was graduated from Penn State University with bachelor of science degrees in dairy science and agricultural education. He grew up on a dairy farm in Armstrong County.

John J. Mattilio

Mattilio is president of the Lancaster County Poultry Association, finance chairman and facilities chairman of the Animal Housing Expo Steering Committee, and teaches Sunday School at Manor Brethren In Christ Church.

Farm Credit Hosts Large Dairies

YORK (York Co.) — Farm Credit Financial Management Service (FMS) hosted representatives from 18 Pennsylvania dairy farms on April 16.

These farms participated in the Large Dairy Benchmark Program, a program which allows dairies with more than 150 cows to compare their financial and production results with others in Pennsylvania, New York, New England, and the lake states.

"The interest and response to this service has been great," noted Jonas Kauffman, FMS executive director. "We are excited to have so many farms involved."

More than 90 farms are part of the program, including 20 from Pennsylvania.

The Large Dairy Benchmark Program begins with a Farm Credit staff member gathering financial and production data from each participating farm. This information is compiled into a personalized report which compares the individual's dairy's results with the group's average results and the top 20 percent "benchmark."

The April 16 gathering provided an opportunity for participants to receive and examine their reports and to discuss special topics such as 2x vs. 3x milking, parlor efficiency, and culling rate.

"One vary interesting part of that meeting for the farmers is that they share a lot with each other. That was one of the highlights," said Kauffman.

Feedback from participants has been positive. The Large Dairy Benchmark Program is a "well-run program with accurate analysis," said Steve Graybeal of Graywood Farms, Lancaster County. "It's the best analysis I've come up with."

Francis and Daniel Mains show off the commodity shed they added during an expansion of their operation. Labor efficiency and cash flow have improved as a result of the improvements the Mainses made after participating in Farm Credit's Large Dairy Benchmark Program.

Dan Mains, a dairy farmer in Cumberland County, also appreciates the opportunity to compare his farm's results with others.

"You can see what individual weaknesses you have and what you can do to correct them," he said. "The in-depth analysis showed that we weren't efficient enough with the cow numbers we had relative to our other assets and the number of employees that worked for us, so we decided to expand from 250 to 370 cows."

For the Mainses, this expansion meant building a new freestall barn and renovating and expanding an existing parlor.

That was two years ago. The Mainses' latest Large Dairy Benchmark report shows that labor efficiency and cash flow have improved.

In the upcoming months, Farm Credit staff members will meet one-on-one with each participating farm to go over its report. This will help ensure that participants benefit as much as possible from the experience.

Michelin Introduces Agribib Radials

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Michelin introduces a new size in its line of Agribib radials — the 18.4 R 46 Agribib, designed for traditional American 30-inch row crops.

With a diameter of 78 inches, the new Agribib fits front-wheel-assist higher horsepower tractors and can be used in duals on the rear of the tractor. This tire is one in a new range of Agribib sizes Michelin is developing to support the North American market.

Michelin has engineered its entire line of Agribib radials with new technology aimed at increasing productivity. A deep tread and a large, flat tread area reduce wear to give the tires exceptionally long life. This translates into low post per acre. In addition, a deep, sharp vertical lug design allows the tires to retain traction up to 70 percent worn.

Extremely flexible sidewalls, designed to give the Agribib a long footprint, are another key to increased traction. The long footprint puts mor of the tires' R1W lugs in direct contact with the soil. The result is excellent pulling power, even in muddy soil. At the same time, low ground contact pressure and the tires' rounded shoulders minimize soil compaction.

Millcreek Fence & Farm Honored

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Knight Manufacturing Corp. of Brodhead, Wis. has awarded a Dealer Sales Plaque to MillCreek Fence & Farm of Lancaster for outstanding sales efforts in 1997.

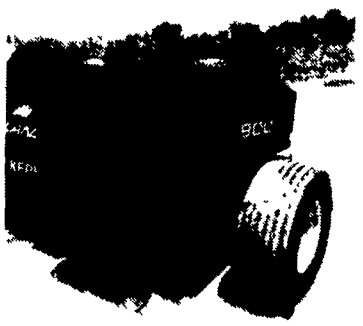
Knight, with manufacturing facilities in Brodhead and Greeley, Colo., is a leading manufacturer of 3000 Series Reel Auggie TMR mixers, Knight-Botec 4000 Series TMR mixers, 8000 Series Pro-Twin Slinger side-discharge spreaders, and 1000 Series box-type spreaders for agricultural and commercial/industrial use.

Process Silage With New Holland Harvester

CHRISTIANA (Lancaster Co.) — Georgetown Kernel Processor Co. announced the availability of a conversion kit which will expand the capability of New Holland pull-type harvesters, enabling farmers to process corn silage in the field.

The unit can be quickly converted to make haylage by simply sliding out the bottom diverter pans. Haylage then passes through the harvester without causing damage or additional wear to processor rolls.

Built using heavy duty formed steel parts, the Georgetown Kernel Processor unit is intended to give longer life and more reliable service than other equipment of this type. Two 8½ -inch x 22-inch hardened steel rolls with ¼ -inch machined grooves adjust to give farmers the specific size corn silage or crimped high moisture corn they desire.



Built using heavy duty formed steel parts, the Georgetown Kernel Processor unit is intended to give longer life and more reliable service than other equipment of this type.

The rolls turn at different speeds providing better breakage of kernels. To extend the life of the drive belts and bearings, the unit's design features a rigid mounted top roll with bottom roll supported on a through shaft. Specially selected anti-corrosion ball bearings, flanged cartridge bearings, and moisture-resistant seals provide added life and reduce maintenance. With stainless steel chosen for certain high wear parts, life of those parts is extended and do wn time minimized.

The unit can be removed conveniently for service if needed. The Georgetown Kernel Processor Kit is designed to be installed complete in one day by qualified local shops and includes everything needed to convert New Holland harvesters for reliably processing thousands of tons of dry or high moisture corn.

Agco Allis Rolls Out Tractors

AGCO Allis introduces six new tractor models that offer improved comfort, convenience, and transmission features, all-new low-profile styling, new engines, and PTO horsepower choices ranging from 70 to 145.

ATLANTA, Ga. – AGCO Allis introduces six new tractor models that offer improved comfort, convenience, and transmission features, all-new low-profile styling, new engines, and PTO horsepower choices ranging from 70 to 145.

Scheduled to arrive at local dealerships this fall, the tractors divide into two distinct groups—the 8700 Series, which includes four models from 70 to 110 hp and the 9700 Series, with two models at 125 and 145 PTO horsepower, respectively.

"The 8700 Series offers producers a choice of either a climate controlled cab or an open ROPS platform on all models, and the 9700 Series features all-new cabs, engines, and styling," said Randy Cameron, general marketing manger for AGCO Allis tractors. "The cabs on the 8700 tractors are really unique," Cameron noted. "They have double doors that are extra wide for easy entry and exit from either side of the machine. Since tractors of this size are used for variety of jobs around the farm, especially in livestock areas, we've included a lot of convenience and productivity features.

"Plus, we beefed up the hydraulics so each tractor can lift more," Cameron said.

All six models are available in either two wheel or all wheel drive and come with wet, multi-disc clutches that are cooled and lubricated in hydraulic oil for extended life. The 8745 and 8765 offer a choice of 12 x 4 partially synchronized transmission or 12 x 12 fully synchronized transmissions with matched forward/reverse shuttle shifting

The 8775 and 8785 sport 4-speed powershift transmissions with forward/reverse shuttle as standard. The 9735 and 9745 models offer a 4-speed powershift as standard and a optional 18-speed powershift transmission with forward/reverse shuttle shifting.

USDA Grants Gov. Ridge's Request For Disaster Declaration

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Tom Ridge announced that the USDA has granted his request to declare a major disaster for farmers in four Pennsylvania counties.

Family farmers in Allegheny, Berks, Somerset, and Wyoming countries are eligible to apply for federal disaster aid, including Farm Service Agency (FSA) emergency loans.

Ridge made the request for disaster assistance because of the severe storms, tornadoes, and flooding that damaged these counties on May 31 through June 2, 1998. Gov. Ridge's request for farm assistance was made in conjunction with his general disaster relief request to President Clinton on June 3.

"We are very pleased that the request for assistance to the commonwealth's number one industry has been approved," Ridge said. "This has been a very difficult planting season for Pennsylvania farmers, and the official declaration from the USDA will offer some support for our struggling farmers."

In addition to the above counties, 19 other Pennsylvania counties are named as contiguous counties where eligible family farmers also may qualify for FSA emergency loan assistance. The eligible counties are Armstrong, Beaver, Bedford, Bradford, Butler, Cambria, Chester, Fayette, Lackawanna, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lehigh, Luzerne, Montgomery, Schuylkill, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Washington, and Westmoreland.

Emergency loan applications will be accepted through Feb. 8, 1999, for physical and productive losses. The current interest rate is 3.75 percent.

Damage assessment reports were completed and confirmed by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service and the State Emergency Board, based on information from county emergency boards.

For more information, farmers are urged to contact their local Farm Service Agency, which is listed in the blue pages of the telephone book.

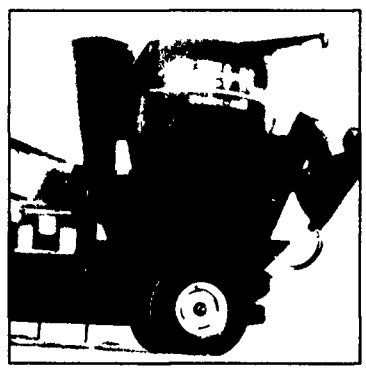
GEHL



The #1 Name in Feedmaking

Gehl Mix-All® portable grinder-mixers have been leading the industry for over 35 years Whether you're feeding today's "leaner" hogs and beef, poultry, or top-producing dairy cows, look at Gehl grinder mixers for these advanced features

- Total hydraulic control. The self-contained hydraulic system allows infinite speeds to power the discharge conveyor, unloading auger and infeed attachments
- Remote controls operate the unloading conveyor from the tractor seat or from the rear of the machine
- Electronic scales for precise ration weighing
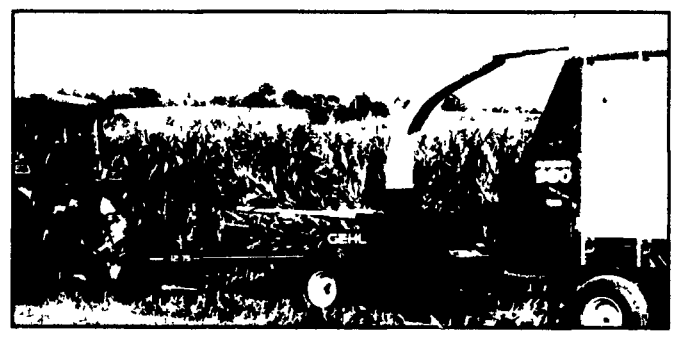
- Customize your machine with a wide variety of options and attachments



New! PULL-TYPE Crop Processing Forage Harvester

Chop and process corn silage with one pass through the field Gehl's high-speed grooved rolls crack kernels, break up the cob and smash the stalk The results 10 to 20 percent higher digestibility for significant increases in milk production.

- Huge harvesting capacity – utilizes up to 300 tractor horsepower
- Eight-knife cutting cylinder delivers length of cut up to 1 inch
- Swing-away auger allows access to cylinder knives, processing rolls
- Roll assembly is easily removable for haylage operations.
- Processing roll gap adjusts for varying crop conditions

Other Quality Rhino Equipment In Stock!

The Rhino® SE8 and SE10 are economical rotary mowers designed to help maintain larger acreages of grass, weeds, stalks, or material up to 1" in diameter.

SE8 SE10 In Stock

The streamlined close-coupled design allows economical operation on tractors as small as 30 horsepower on the SE8 and 45 horsepower on the SE10 The 85 HP center gearbox and 60 HP outboard gearboxes are protected from sudden shockloads by a slip clutch on the main driveline and torque dampeners on the side driveshafts Pan blade carriers help the unit glide over field obstacles and updraft blades with a 4 blade overlap provide a clean cut The SE8 is available as a 540 RPM unit with either a CAT II lift or clevis pull-type hitch to fit a range of tractors The SE10 is available with either a heavy-duty CAT II-III Q H or pull-type hitch for 540 or 1000 RPM tractors The 10 gauge deck is reinforced front-to-rear and side-to-side for optimum strength The Cat 4 main driveline and all gearboxes are fully-shielded for greater operator safety Front and rear safety deflectors are standard equipment to help reduce the risk of damage or injury due to thrown objects Front and rear chain guards are optional equipment Compare and you will see why the Rhino SE8 and SE10 are excellent choices for economical wide-cut mowers

Farmers, Turn Your Trimmers Into Brush Cutters. Trim Your Fence Line Quicker And Easier!

Brush Cutting Tools

Try The Head That Cuts Where Others Can't

The Benefits of using A Tuff-Kutt Head:

- Versatile - cuts all types of vegetation from brush and bramble to small saplings.
- High Tech aluminum magnesium alloy head.
- Heat treated steel cutting blades for long life and productivity.
- User friendly - less fatigue and arm wrenching and it reduces clearing time by half.
- Adaptability - fits most straight shaft trimmers and brush cutters from 20cc and above.
- Application - Tuff-Kutt I for heavy duty commercial use; Tuff-Kutt II for light commercial, residential use.

WHY BUY A CASE IH AXIAL-FLOW COMBINE?

- The Field Tracker option allows the header to follow ground contours and pivot side to side, independent of the combine, for maximum harvest efficiency.
- Our specialty rotor can harvest grain in wet conditions when conventional combines will not.
- The cab that revolutionized comfort, visibility and convenience. Dozens of adjustments allow it to literally conform to the operator.
- New, 3-speed rotor drive in 2388 offers even greater flexibility and more total speed range. Rotor speed easily adjusts from the operator platform or the rear of the machine. Exclusive belt technology extends belt life.
- Pressure and flow-compensated hydraulics are featured on the header lift, reel lift, unloader swing, steering and the optional Field Tracker. This improves power efficiency and responsiveness.
- Optional straw and chaff spreader distributes chaff and crop residue evenly across the field.
- Chaffer sieve now has 3 adjustaable sections; the front, middle and rear sections adjust independently for improved performance.
- The patented Cross Flow fan provides uniform airflow across the cleaning system - for cleaner grain, while using less horsepower.
- New, optional flotation tires (68.00.00 x 32) reduce soil compaction and provide better flotation in wet conditions.

WE HAVE MORE COMBINES IN STOCK THAN 90% OF THE DEALERS SELL ALL YEAR LONG!

- THE HOOBER BOOM - allows us to pull engines with out you having to pay to bring it into the shop. Only Hoober has it.
- EXPERIENCE - Hoober's conbine technicians have worked solely on combines for more than 20 years. They have tips for the factory guys.
- PARTS INVENTORY - When you're sitting in the field, you want the part now. If Hoober doesn't have it, they'll get it faster.
- CONTINUED EDUCATION - Hoober never misses a chance to fractory-train their technicians.
- AWARDS - Hoober wins sales and service awards on a regular basis.
- SURVEYS - Our last customer survey showed a 98.6% approval rating.
- SELECTION - Largest selection of new and used combines.
- Hoober employees genuinely care about solving your problems.

WHEN YOU'RE SITTING IN THE FIELD THERE'S NOTHING MORE VALUABLE THAN HOOBER SERVICE & PARTS INVENTORY.

NEW LEADER
NEW LEADER L2020GT
Fertilizer and Lime Spreader

Designed for a new generation of custom applicator, the L-2020GT dual spinner dry fertilizer and ag-lime spreader features an easy-to-use Mark III ground speed control system for adjusting application rates on the go, and a highly-advanced, corrosion-resistant paint system with fully welded and caulked hopper construction The L-2020GT also features a stainless steel "turnkleen" idler pulley that insures proper belt tracking and a newly-designed stainless steel product flow divider for an even more precise placement of material

Dr. William B. Roush, Associate Professor of Poultry Science

Ascites (also known as Pulmonary Hypertension Syndrome) is a metabolic disease in broilers that increases in incidence when broiler flocks grow rapidly and decreases in incidence when flock growth rates are restricted. Ascites has become a major cause of economic loss

Joint studies between Dr. Bob Wideman at the University of Arkansas and Dr. Bill Roush at Penn State University are being conducted to examine methods of detection of birds that have a tendency to develop ascites.

The objective of these studies is to give producers a tool for identification of birds prone to ascites so those birds can be removed from the genetic population A previous study using artificial neural networks and several physiological measurements has been already reported (Lancaster Farming, November 23, 1998, 42(3)·D2). The current study involves the monitoring of the daily growth of broilers for evidence of a tendency of the birds to develop ascites

Growth is usually described as a cumulative weight over time resulting in an S-shaped growth curve. Growth can also be described in physics terminology as velocity (growth rate) and acceleration (the rate of growth rate).

Previous work at Penn State on nonlinear dynamics of growth has shown that day-to-day growth velocity and acceleration can be divided into three distinct growth phases The phases can be identified as (1) 0-15 days, (2) 16-35 days and (3) 35 to 50 days

These growth phases exhibit increased oscillating behavior. Growth responses in the last two phases can be very erratic or chaotic (Lancaster Farming April 22, 1995).

A hypothesis was formed, based on previous nonlinear research on heart rate, that normal birds would exhibit oscillating behavior while ascitic birds would be more steady in growth behavior. Because of success in diagnosis and prediction of complex data using artificial neural networks, a second hypothesis was proposed.

That is, that an artificial neural network would be able to differentiate between normal birds and birds with ascites based on individual daily growth velocities and accelerations. Artificial neural networks are computer programs that have been developed to mimic the biological network of neurons present in the biological brain. Artificial neural networks have been shown to be very successful in prediction and classification problems.

An experiment was conducted involving 46 male broiler chicks from a breeder pullet line. Growth data form each bird was obtained by manually weighing the birds for each of 50 days on an electron balance.

The birds were raised in a pen, provided water, ad libitum, and feed as mash for the first three days and pellets thereafter. Birds surviving to 50 days and prior mortality were examined for the presence or absence of ascites. Of the 46 birds, 13 were identified as having ascites and the remaining 33 were considered normal.

Average growth velocity and acceleration and standard deviation values were statistically evaluated as response variables for each growing phase Average values for velocity and acceleration during the third phase were different between normal birds and those with ascites.

The third phase standard deviations of velocity and acceleration (reflecting oscillation for velocity and acceleration), were greater for normal birds as compared to birds with ascites. The results suggest that while strains of birds with high growth rates are more prone to ascites, individual birds not getting ascites (within the high growth strain) have higher growth rates and more oscillation than birds within the strain that are prone to ascites.

An artificial neural network (General Regression Neural Network) was trained to predict ascites based on the day-to-day growth velocity and acceleration Data represented the first, first two, and all three growth phases The responses of birds in all three data sets were successfully classified (100%) as having or not having ascites.

These results are quite promising. In the future, artificial neural networks may have the potential for computerized diagnostic weighing of birds to determine which birds have a tendency to develop ascites.

Cattlemen's Field Day Looks At Pasture, Land, Breeding

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Techniques in forage and pasture management will be the theme at the 23rd Annual Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Summer Field Day, Saturday, July 18 at the McElhaney Stock Farm and the Hookstown Fairgrouonds in Hookstown.

The event also will be an opportunity for Pennsylvania cattlemen to demonstrate environmentally friendly processes now in use by livestock producers, according to Dr. Lowell Wilson, Penn State professor of animal science and secretary of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association.

"Our theme and demonstration projects were selected to show that beef producers and others are looking to conserve and replenish our natural resources at the same time they are using them," Wilson said. "It's all part of being better caretakers of our land and water. This event will be of interest to beef, dairy and sheep producers; but it's also a good opportunity for non-farm people to learn more about sustainable methods of livestock production."

New practices and technologies used for water control, estrus synchronization, grazing management systems are among the special topics planned. Other demonstrations will include ova transplant procedures, pasture species selection, fencing programs, and hoof trimming.

Liability issues connected with the use of electrically charged fencing and other farming practices will be the focus at a special luncheon sponsored by Mid-Atlantic Genetic Productions. Dr. Terry Etherton, head of Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, also will discuss challenges and opportunities confronting the animal industries. The Pennsylvania State Shorthorn Show will be held on Saturday morning at the Hookstown Fairgrounds.

Other field day activities include a tour of the Duquesne Light Nuclear Power Plant of the Beaver Valley Power Station, followed by the All-Breed Beaver County Junior Show. Afternoon and evening activities include a Keystone steak dinner and music and dancing at the farm. The event will close with fitting and showing demonstrations on Sunday, July 19.

Exhibits and presentations will be staffed by representatives of Penn State Cooperative Extension and faculty members of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, as well as by staff from the Beaver County Natural Resource Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The event is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (PCA), the Pennsylvania Shorthorn Association and the Washington County Cattlemen's Association, in cooperation with Penn State Cooperative Extension and the university's Department of Dairy and Animal Science.

Registration will be from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. at the McElhaney Stock Farm. Admission is free to anyone interested in animal agriculture.

More information can be obtained by calling PCA at (814) 692-4208, McElhaney's Stock Farm at (724) 573-9043, the Penn State Department of Dairy and Animal Science at (814) 863-3659, or Penn State Cooperative Extension in Beaver County at (724) 774-3003.

Winners Announced At The Ohio Angus Preview Show

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Breeders paraded 100 females and 26 bulls for judge Chad Ward, El Dorado, Ohio, at the 1998 Ohio Angus Preview Show. The event was held June 20 at the Ross County Fairgrounds in Chillicothe, Ohio.

Top honors in the bull show went to Gridiron, an April 1997 son of Rito 9FB3 of 5H11 Fullback. The entry is owned by Levi Deger, Lebanon, Ohio, and first was named the junior champion bull.

The reserve grand champion bull was Kiata Gunner. Kiata Farms Inc., Hamilton, Ohio, exhibited the January 1997 son of N Bar Emulation EXT, which first won reserve junior champion bull.

In the female competition, Champion Hill Phyllis 763 took grand champion female honors after first winning junior champion heifer. The March 1997 daughter of N Bar Emulation EXT was exhibited by Morgan Woodward, Gallipolis, Ohio.

Champion Hill Sunshine 854 walked away with reserve grand champion female honors after first being named reserve junior champion heifer. Champion Hill, Bidwell, Ohio, and Sayre Brothers, Cottageville, W.Va., exhibited the April 1997 daughter of Rito 9FB3 of 5H11 Fullback.

Lust To Lead National Sorghum Association

ABERNATHY, Texas — The National Grain Sorghum Producers board of directors has named Tim Lust as the interim executive director of the association.

Jack Eberspacher, who served as NGSP executive director for more than eight years, has resigned to become the executive director of the National Association of Wheat Growers.

"On behalf of the NGSP board of directors," said Kenny Tevis, NGSP president, "I want to wish Jack as much success in the future as he has brought to the sorghum industry in the past."

Eberspacher said that it was an honor to serve as the chief executive officer of the National Grain Sorghum Producers for the past eight and one-half years.

"The sorghum producers are headed in the right direction. There is great leadership on the board of directors and the staff," Eberspacher said, "I wish everyone the best."

Lust has served as director of marketing and research for the association for the past five years.

"Tim's knowledge, background and experience as director of marketing and research make him highly qualified to assume these new duties," Tevis said. "He has been involved with all of the issues that sorghum producers are facing today.

"His work in these areas ensures that the agenda and focus of representing the sorghum producer's interests and concerns continue to be the prime objective of the association. We look forward to working with him."

DIGGING DOWN? POWER UP!

Kubota introduces the KX-Series mini-compact excavators from 22.2 HP to 42.7 HP, featuring Kubota's "Power Up" hydraulic system that increases digging performance and traveling speed

Whatever your construction needs, we have the right excavator for you. The KX-41 and KX-71 come with a two speed swing system that improves operator feel in delicate digging areas, while the KX-101 and KX-151 are equipped with the "TPSS" two pattern selection system that lets the operator choose the most comfortable operating pattern

If you require an excavator that delivers superior performance and digging capabilities, work a Kubota KX Excavator and "Power Up"

Model	HP	Digging Depth	Operating Weight
KX-41	22.2	6'9 1" -7'11 3"	3,615 lbs
KX-71	32.2	8'9 1" - 10"2"	6,415 lbs
KX-101	36.6	10'1 3" - 12"5"	8,115 lbs
KX-151	42.7	12'0 3" - 12'8"	12,025 lbs

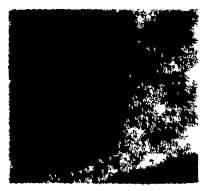
WARNING, ALL SILO OWNERS

Check your silo now for rotten staves. If you have been using your silo for 10 to 15 years for either corn silage or haylage, it is time to SHOTCRETE

RESURFACES INTERIORS:
- Coats the silo's interior
- Protects feed in storage
- Durable, tough, acid-resistant
- Increase useful life
- Economical

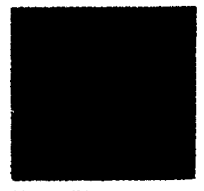
Before The silo's interior with plaster damaged and stave exposed



After . The surface is reconditioned, and a new, thick tough surface will protect stored feed.

REPAIRS HOLES:
- Repairs even large holes
- Up to twice the strength of the original stave
- Rapid application
- Durable surface

Before . . A hole is worn completely through the silo wall



After . With the hole repaired by ShotCrete and a new surface applied, the silo is ready for years of use.

EXTENDS USEFUL LIFE:
- Support for old foundations
- Special repairs can be made... quickly and economically
- Little or no forming needed
- Stronger than the original

Before . . . The bottom part of the stave's are completely worn away.

After The ShotCrete System repairs and replaces the missing structure.

Ag Horizons Conference Approaches

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Wildwood Conference Center of the Harrisburg Area Community College will be the setting for the Ninth Age Horizons Conference Tuesday, July 28.

The conference series is sponsored by The Southeast Regional Council of Cooperatives in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives and Penn State University along with area cooperatives.

Professor of Ag Economics at Penn State, Lou Moore, will set the stage for the day-long program which will focus on risk management — using hedging, options and futures to help manage the risk inherent in today's agriculture.

Russell Redding, deputy secretary, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, will discuss changing government attitudes toward commodity support. Tommy Walker, marketing manager of the Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange in New York, will explain how the exchange functions and how and why to use this form of "risk management."

Dr. James Dunn, professor of ag economics at Penn State, will conduct a hands-on workshop which will provide the attendees with take-home teaching materials. Two associates of the Lehigh Valley Grain Marketing Club — Lehigh County Extension Agent John W. Berry and Keystone Farm Credit, ACA Executive Loan Officer Ricky L. Butz — will illustrate a functioning marketing organization.

The program will begin with a continental breakfast at 8:30 a.m., includes lunch, and is anticipated to conclude at 3:30 p.m. Teachers of ag education, business, and science as well as cooperative extension agents who need information may call Carol Duncan, (610) 693-5601.

FORAGING AROUND

'Industry, Farmer, Scientist — Working Together Toward A Sounder Grassland Program'

Franklin County Dairymen Understand Needs Of Grazing Cows

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Franklin County grazier Doug Martin understands cows.

He knows they enjoy "open air" housing. They like fresh, small paddocks. Cows enjoy a "salad bar" mix of grasses, including orchardgrass, ryegrass, matua grass, and clovers.

Cows like smooth, even lanes to walk to pasture. They like to have plenty of water to dip their tongues into on a hot summer day.

Cows enjoy keeping cool, too. In fact, producers see the effects of any kind of heat stress in the milk check.

Martin has taken the wishes of his 300-head Jersey milking herd on his Chambersburg farm to heart.

He has to, because there is literally not enough room for the all-registered herd, in a sense.

The freestall "housing" at Pleasant Valley Jerseys amounts to enough for about 200 cows. Martin has 300 cows to care for — so not all of them can be in the barn at the same time.

This member of the Franklin County Graziers believes that "open air" housing provides enough room to ensure the cows get enough to eat, are comfortable, can be readily milked, and

Dairyman, Conservationist Receives Highest PFGC Award

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEWISTOWN (Mifflin Co.) – James Hostetter calls himself a forage producer even though he's been a dairyman for more than 34 years. It's not that the role is more important. It's simply essential to producing good-quality milk.

Feeding quality forage usually translates into better milk production, and Hostetter does both, with a healthy dose of soil conservation thrown in. His collection of awards proves his dedication in all of these

NAZARETH (Northampton Co.) — As Robert Bieber slowly removes the twine from a 40-pound bale of fresh alfalfa hay, he separates a few slices. Out fall some of the leaves.

"Look at that hay," he says. "No mold or wet spots. Perfect all the way through."

Bieber points to a pallet, ready to ship to one of the horse farms that regularly buy his hay.

"This hay they can feed immediately," he says.

easily handled. What else do cows need?

In mid-April this year Doug and his father Lester conducted a pasture walk for the county graziers at the Chambersburg farm.

Altogether the Martins care for about 800 acres, including rented ground. The home farm makes up about 100 acres. Of the 800, about 350 is in grass for pasturing.

About 350 cows are on test, according to Doug, who farms with his father Lester and Doug's brother-in-law and partner, Paul Holderman.

Doug spoke to the graziers about the farm's management strategy at an April pasture walk conducted through the Franklin County Graziers.

He said, "Our whole business is in the midst of changes."

During the peak growing season, approximately 50 percent of the herd's diet is from the pasture and 50 percent is from a TMR made up of high moisture corn, minerals, corn silage, and grass/alfalfa silage. The amount of TMR varies depending upon the amount of grass available.

The herd on Pa. DHIA milks 10,818 pounds at 5.1 percent fat and 4 percent protein. Milking is from a double-10 parallel parlor to a 1,500-gallon tank twice a day, at 3 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Martin is a member of the Dairy Farmers of America Co-op.

The breeding program consists of using young sires and some proven sires.

Holderman, Martin's partner, has relocated to a 180-acre farm nearby that will be used to raise about 110 heifers. "Those are some of the changes, and we're excited about that," said Martin.

A Franklin County Graziers coordinator, Titus Martin, center left with sunglasses, addresses the group before the start of the pasture walk on the Martin farm in April.

Of the 100 acres on the home farm, all is in grass, which the cows harvest completely. On the heifer and dry cow farms, about half is chopped at first cutting for winter feed.

Lester Martin indicated that having cows to graze keeps the grass nice and can "cut a lot of expense out of feed size," he said.

The heifer calves are fed a combination of grass silage and minerals. The grass silage is an alfalfa-grass mixture. The older heifers and dry cows are fed similarly, with a 14 percent protein supplement.

The milking herd is divided into two groups, "high" and "low." The high group is made up of mostly spring freshening cows and the low group has the late summer and fall calves. They are all fed the same TMR "down the middle" in a bunk dividing the two groups in the barnyard.

Two weeks prior to calving, the pre-fresh cows are fed a little corn silage and a pre-fresh concentrate along with their grass hay and pasture.

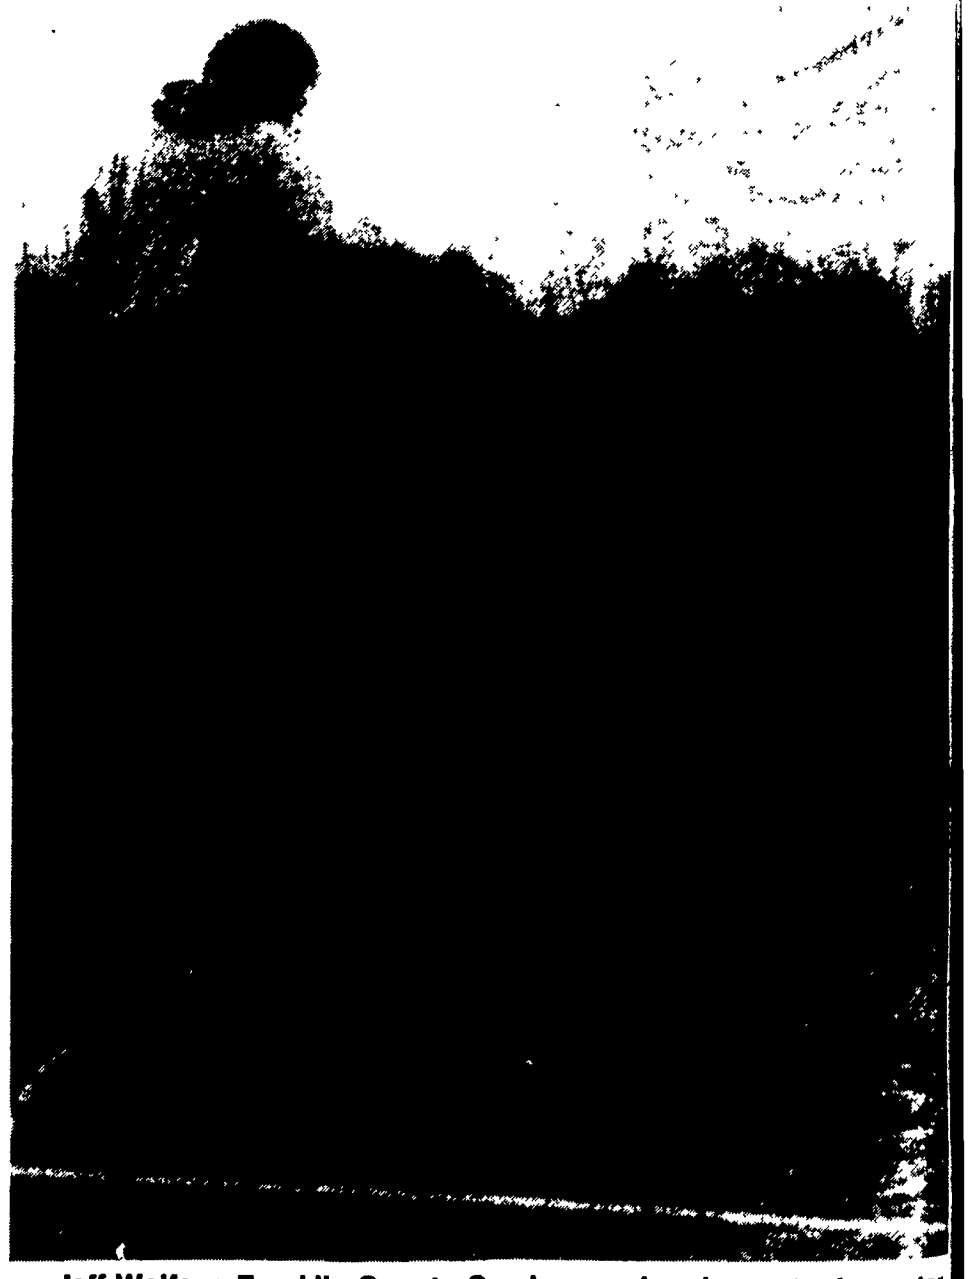
This spring, some legumes were seeded — mostly white clover — in the fields. Last year, matua was seeded using a four- wheeler and a broadcast spreader. Doug Martin inspects the matua.



Jeff Wolfe, a Franklin County Grazier member, inspects the water trough at the Martin farm.

TOMAHAWK BALE SHREDDERS

VERSATILE

- Chop and feed the wettest silage bales.
- Chop dry hay, straw, and corn stalks
- Discharges to either, or both sides for free stall bedding
- Optional hose attachment for hard to reach areas and mulching application
- Models available to handle all sizes of round and big square bales

EASY TO OPERATE

- Load bales with 3 point bale handler, no loader required
- Simple durable construction
- Operate with as little as 60 hp

MANEUVERABLE

- 3 point mounted to operate in close quarters

MULTIPLE BENEFITS

- Improved Palatability, less waste
- Feed silage bales directly into bunk or fenceline feeders Pre-chop material for TMR mixer.
- Improved absorption ability of bedding material, less bedding required
- Clean comfortable beds.
- Easier handling of manure with chopped material

TUBE-LINE BALEWRAPPER

For optimum speed and efficiency patented Tube-Line Wrappers are the answer! Tube-Line Wrappers wrap a continuous row of bales. The airtight application of stretch wrap film retains moisture balance as haylage matures and prevents air infiltration. The shrink wrap also prevents wind damage and accommodates variation in bale size and shape without air gaps.

Long stem silage is better used in the animals digestive system. Feeding high quality haylage from wrapped bales can reduce or eliminate feeding grain while retaining or increasing weight gains or milk production.

Tube-Line wrappers for all round bales or large square bales are available in either manual or fully automatic models.

Nazareth Farmer Learns That Drying Can Lead To Some Really Great Bales Of Hay

farm, reveals the "secrets" to growing high-quality hay — hay that can net a premium price at any auction.

"You know, you can grow bad hay as easily as you can grow good hay," he says, as he lifts a bale of alfalfa-orchardgrass back onto a pallet. But the Nazareth-area crops farmer points out that how hay is baled and dried down can affect the product's price substantially.

The secret is to remove the hay from the field when it is ready. He has baled hay on wet, gray mornings. Then, after a fresh cut, the leaves — a vital source of feed protein — remain intact on the stem, before the bales are dried.

The variety the farmer selects to grow is important, according to Bieber. Growers should look for a product that would make best use of the soil and environment — and it should contain a thin stem area.

The single most critical element to good hay-making? Dry it as fast and efficiently as possible, according to the haymaker.

Bieber has proven his own methods of drying down hay have paid off. Not only does he have to turn away customers for his premium hay, but his hay has consistently placed in champion classes at the Ag Progress Days Hay Show held during Ag Progress at Rockspring in August.

Last year, Bieber placed first in Class 14, alfalfa grass mixed — later cutting. This class features a mixture of alfalfa and grass with more than 10 percent but not more than 50 percent grasses.

He also placed first in Class 20, mixed hay. This class features a hay sample of mixed hay with more than 50 percent grasses. This mixture contains 50 percent or more grass in combination with alfalfa, clover, or birdsfoot trefoil.

Bieber, retired but still working part-time for Chrin, Inc. excavating company in Easton, purchased the farm about 50 years ago. The farm used to be a large potato and crop farm.

At the farm, of 88 acres, about 65 are tillable. With additional rented acreage, Bieber tills a total of 100 acres.

Robert Bieber, with his Jack Russell terrier Mitze, has learned how to dry hay inexpensively, which has resulted in better prices for his hay. Photo by Andy Andrews

About 60 of the conventionally and minimally tilled acreage are in alfalfa and alfalfa-orchardgrass mix. Of the 60, half are pure alfalfa and the other half alfalfa-orchardgrass. The balance of the tillable acres are in corn.

With the alfalfa-orchardgrass mix, Bieber is able to get about four good cuttings a year. The mix averages about 80 bales to the acre.

With the straight alfalfa, about 90-110 bales per acre are possible.

The hay is cut and is allowed to dry. Bieber uses a tedder once or twice to remove the morning dew. The alfalfa is square- baled (three feet in length) at about 25-30 percent moisture.

The alfalfa grass mixtures are baled at 18-20 percent moisture.

All bales, however, are taken through a modified New Holland oil-fueled crop drier that burns oil at about five gallons per hour. The hot air furnace takes in hot air from a connected structure and is taken through a "trench" underneath an 8-foot by 8-foot by 38-foot precast concrete-walled structure with an open roof. The bales are stacked on pallets (600-bale capacity). The forced air, from a 5-horsepower motor, is delivered at temperatures about 200-205 degrees. The air is forced from the delivery trench through the bottom of the bales. The top is open to allow moisture to escape.

Bieber's hay has lots of leaf material.

All bales, however, are taken through a modified New Holland oil-fueled crop drier that burns oil at about five gallons per hour. Here, Bieber checks out the motor.

When stored, a tarp is used to cover the bales. Tarp is also wedged in between the pallets and the wall surface to act as an insulator and to ensure the air moves directly up through the bales.

The drying shed structure is the "smartest investment I made in my life," said Bieber.

The structure, built in 1987, costs about 7,000, not including the cost of the drier. The drier cost about $1,500.

All bales must be dried for about 24 hours before they are ready to be stacked in a nearby barn and then shipped.

LEAFHOPPER PRESSURE-RESISTANT ALFALFA VARIETIES SHOW PROMISE

Remember the leafhopper explosion of last summer? Literally overnight, high populations of adult potato leafhoppers descended on alfalfa fields all over the Northeast. Even areas of northern Pennsylvania and New York were hit hard, where potato leafhopper (PLH) is considered an "occasional pest."

Again, leafhopper pressure is severe, especially in southern Pennsylvania and Maryland. Many spring seedlings and second-cutting regrowth which were not sprayed have been seriously yellowed and stunted.

Do you personally sweep for leafhoppers or do you hire someone for insect scouting? Regardless of who does the scouting, it will pay to keep a sweep net handy and learn how to identify leafhopper adults and numphs. They can be easily confused with other small insects such as aphids, almost always caught at the same time.

Leafhopper scouting is easy to do and is the best way to decide if an insecticide application is needed.

Don't wait to see your fields turn a sickly yellow. Real damage to forage quality, especially protein, and yields occurs quickly and before you see the signs. The yellowing results from a buildup of carbohydrate in the leaves which can not be translocated to the

The cows are allowed free access to the pastures for feed.

The milking cows are fed two mixer loads per day. The mixer gets a bag of minerals in addition to 1,400 pounds of high-moisture corn and a combination ⅔ corn silage and ⅓ grass (including alfalfa/orchardgrass and some barley).

The challenge is to keep the cows fed well, despite the fact there are "more cows than stalls," said Martin.

This spring, some legumes were seeded — mostly white clover — in the fields. Last year, matua was seeded using a four-wheeler and a broadcast spreader.

On the existing pastures, last year 50 units of nitrogen per acre were spread in straight urea form. Urea is placed on the pastures 2-3 times per year, although last year the summer application was skipped because of the drought. The fields require less commercial nitrogen because the cows are "doing a good job of spreading the manure," said Martin.

Some manure is hauled to rented ground.

What are the cows looking for when they enter a pasture? For the Martins, the "cows like a new lot every day," he said. For the cows, it could be even a "psychological" thing, having fresh grass to mow down.

Importantly, the cow paths have to be smooth. Recently Martin graded out a very rocky lane leading to the major pastures on the farm. The lanes have 6-8 inches of slate and are about 16-20 feet wide. Manure can be scraped from the lanes when necessary.

Some fields have fescue and barcel grasses. Others have matua, ryegrass, bluegrass, and clover — an "eclectic" mix that cows enjoy. Martin indicated, however, that cows "really love Johnsongrass."

The lots are arranged in paddocks measuring two acres each. "Smaller lots more often is what the cows like," said Martin. "So we give them what they like."

Fresh water is pumped out to the pastures on a 3/4-inch black plastic line, which was simply laid down and ended up burying itself. The line, when it eventually wears out, will be replaced with a 1-inch line, Martin said.

Fresh water is pumped out to the pastures on a ¾ -inch black plastic line, which was simply laid down and ended up burying itself. The line, when it eventually wears out, will be replaced with a 1-inch line, Martin said.

The lots are arranged in paddocks measuring two acres each.

"Smaller lots more often is what the cows like," said Martin. "So we give them what they like."

The mixture of terapo orchardgrass, ryegrass, and matua was seeded two years ago in the spring.

Weeds can be handled with spot spraying. With a four-wheeler, farmhands go through and use a field sprayer with Banvel and 2,4-D for control of Canada thistle.

The farm still maintains enough stored feed for the winter months and for the supplemental feeding. According to Holderman, the farm harvests about 350 acres of corn. About 100 acres of alfalfa are chopped. Fifty acres of barley are also chopped and the farm also harvests about 30 acres of wheat.

High moisture corn is stored in two upright silos at the farm. Bunkers maintain the corn silage and a good percentage of barleyage and haylage.

The Martins are host to Isaac Ouattara from Burkina Fasa, West Africa. Isaac helps in the fields, driving tractors, repairing fence, and working in the milking parlor. He is staying with the Martins for a year through the Mennonite Central Committee (MCC) visitor exchange program.

Isaac said that in his country, 70 percent is subsistence farming. "We have cows," he said. But a lot of farming is citrus fruit, including oranges and grapefruit. He noted that the experiences he has had on the Martin farm have been good, "with so many cows to milk." There are 65 students in the exchange program, two on farms.

Many travel to grade school to teach students about the programs, including the 10,000 villages program offered by the MCC.

Also working at Pleasant Valley Jerseys are full-time employees Sharon Ocker and Harold Shover. Sharon does milking while Harold helps with fieldwork, feeding, and various tasks. There are two part-timers, Jack Rotz and Holley Carbaugh, who work after school and on weekends. Both help with milking in addition to other jobs.

❖ GRAZING BITS ❖

• Just how important are earthworms? Consider some of the functions of earthworms in the soil. Earthworm tunnels will help loosen soil, make root pathways, redistribute organic matter, drain soil, and aerate soil. One of the biggest reasons earthworms leave a field is when the organic matter is buried due to heavy tillage. The most number of earthworms will be found in no-till fields.

• How much forage do you lose from deer damage? Some recent studies from the Penn State farms suggest that you can lose approximately 1,660 pounds of DM when deer graze pure alfalfa stands. They also found that deer will graze less when there is some orchardgrass mixed with the alfalfa. If you are planting alfalfa strips near wooded areas or heavy deer areas, you may consider mixing some orchardgrass into those seedings. Deer grazing preference, in order, was alfalfa, alfalfa/timothy mix, alfalfa/orchardgrass mix.

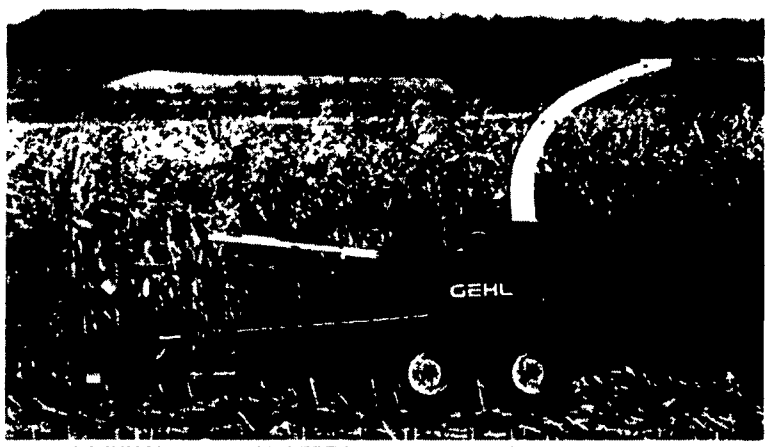
1275 Forage Harvester

WITH EXCLUSIVE CROP PROCESSOR™



A NEW, INNOVATIVE CONCEPT IN PULL-TYPE FORAGE HARVESTER.

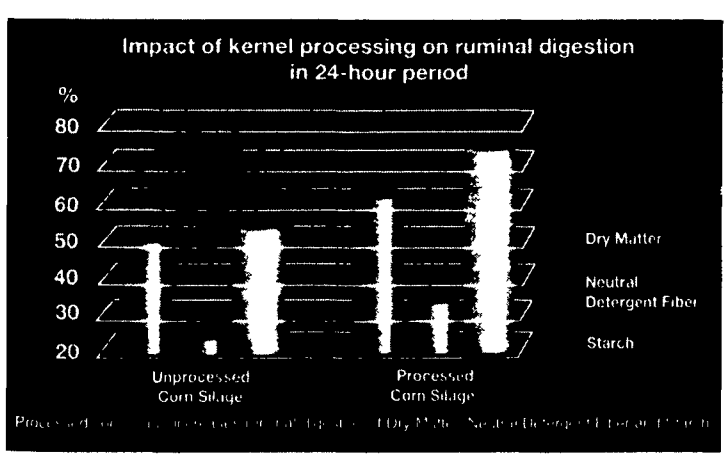
Above, left: The Crop Processor features a pair of high-speed grooved rolls that crack kernels, break up the cob and "condition" the stalk material. The rolls can be removed for chopping haylage

Middle: A positive multi-band V-belt drive transfers power to the crop Processor rolls*

Right: A cross-auger with double flighting quickly, efficiently and smoothly moves processed crop to the high-speed blower*

Specifications and benefits of new Gehl Model 1275

- Largest capacity pull-type forage harvester
- Exclusive Crop Processor™ cracks kernels, breaks up the cob and "conditions" the stalk material
- Crop processing rolls mounted in an assembly directly behind cutting cylinders
- 4-cut processing rolls 8 1/2 inch diameter full width – 26 5 inches Rolls driven by four matched double "V" bolts
- Processing rolls with auger swing away to allow access to rolls and cutting cylinder
- Roll gap adjustable to match crop conditions
- Rolls can be removed as an assembly for hay operation
- Unique double flighted auger (12 inches in diameter) operates at 1,000 rpm to feed blower uniformly and efficiently Auger is shear bolt protected
- Exclusive Auto-MAX™ system protects blower from plugging



Benefits of processing

The benefits of processed corn silage can easily outweigh the investment. Reports from dairy farmers who have already used a prototype model report increased milk production of two to four pounds per cow per day. Theses results are confirmed by a recent Washington State University study that show average responses of two to three pounds.

The Most Powerful Blower Made In Stock At Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc. - 1000 RPM Model 1580 Gehl - Get One Today!

The three main factors that contribute to a forage blower's capacity are tip speed, hopper capabilities and available horsepower Generally speaking, for optimum capacity, the blower requires at least one horsepower for each foot the material must be blown

For instance, a blower on a 20-foot-diameter by 60-foot-center silo would require 70-plus horsepower On a 25-foot-diameter by 90-foot center fill silo you should have 100-plus horsepower

Choose The Gehl Blower That's Right For You

With three models it's easy to match a high-capacity Gehl blower to your operation In side by side tests at a 100' silo, Gehl blowers out-performed the best the competition had to offer, with the Model 1580 cleaning out an 18 self-unloading box full of haylage 18% faster than the closest competitive blower and 25% faster than one of the so called 'leaders

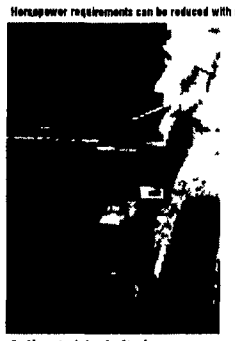
Gehl s secret is the twin spinner delivery system and the twin-sided fan Two 24-inch spinners rifle your crop into the blower fan at nearly 35 mph There, the twin-sided fan, with paddles on each side, blows the material up the pipe with ease it s almost like getting the performance of two blowers in one

Gehl blowers are also loaded with on convenience features you're sure to appreciate

As a guideline, we recommend the following

Silo size	HP required	Gehl Model
20'Wx60'-70' high	70 hp	FB1540
20'Wx80' high	90 hp	FB1580 (540 rpm) in stock
25'Wx90' and higher	100+ hp	FB1580 (1000 rpm) in stock

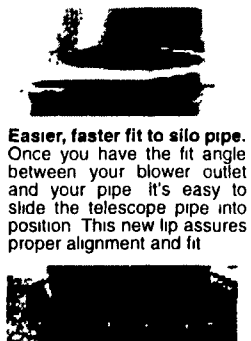
Horsepower requirements can be reduced with smoother unloading forage boxes and a wider gooseneck at the top of the silo



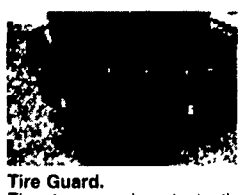
Adjustable left tire. Setting up at the silo is faster and easier The adjustable left axle lets you line up the blower without loosening and adjusting the rim sheet Simply adjust the tire up or down until you get the matching angle to your pipe

Swing away blower outlet. They're more than tremendous blowing capacity designed into these blowers Gehl swing away outlet makes it easier than ever to check fan paddle and rim sheet clearances and for rim sheet liner replacement (Note this outlet should never be opened until the pto is disconnected from the tractor and the blower disc has stopped turning

Greater rim sheet life. These blowers feature split rim sheets with a special inner, replaceable liner This extra hard liner is twice the thickness of ordinary rim sheet steel In addition, when it finally does wear out, you only replace the liner that fits in the extreme wear area of the blower, right below the outlet You don't have to replace the entire rim sheet! The result reduced costs over the life of your Gehl blower



Easier, faster fit to silo pipe. Once you have the fit angle between your blower outlet and your pipe it's easy to slide the telescope pipe into position This new lip assures proper alignment and fit



Tire Guard. This tire guard protects the right blower tire when you're cleaning up around the blower with a silage fork It is standard equipment on the 1580 and 1560, optional on the 1540

Believe It Or Not, Gehl Blowers Have Less Moving Parts Than Most Competitive Models.

JUD HEINRICHS
Dairy And Animal Science Extension
Penn State

This spring and summer, as you are making haylage and hay, keep in mind some basic management principles of good forage making.

First of all, proper maturity counts. In fact it is likely the most important part of a good forage program.

Second, check dry matter. If it is haylage, we know that there are specific moisture ranges that encourage good packing and fermentation. If we go too wet, which is less than 30 percent dry matter, or too dry, greater than 60 percent dry matter, we drastically increase the likelihood of a poor fermentation.

High quality silage requires a proper fermentation to promote good intakes and high levels of milk production. The only way to know the dry matter of haylage is to measure it. Use a microwave, oven, or koster tester — but you must measure the first load and check it periodically. If you are good at squeezing a handful to monitor moisture, then calibrate your handful with a few measured analyses in the microwave. Very few people can retain their hand squeezing calibration over the winter or from cutting to cutting.

A next point for haylage is to check particle size as you chop it. Nothing you do to haylage after harvest increases the particle size but everything reduces particle size post-harvest. Silo filling, solo unloading, TMR mixers, and feed delivery systems all reduce particle size of forage.

Some systems are minimal in their effects and some are great. If moisture ranges are monitored for haylage, it is strongly suggested to try to achieve the greatest particle length possible that will fit with your storage and feeding systems.

For upright silos, you are more limited that with bunker silos in terms of acceptable length. Bunker silos still have to have proper moisture in order to pack longer material.

Never compromise a good fermentation with too long a particle size. The problems of poor packing and moldy, poorly fermented haylage will far outweigh any increases that you may gain from longer haylage particle size.

If the maturity and moisture of the crop are in the proper ranges, then getting your cow's physical effective fiber from grass or legume forages in the form of haycrop silage, balage, and hay will usually beat the physical fiber achieved from corn silage. There are often more problems with fermentation and fiber digestibility from long chopper corn silage supplying physical effective fiber for your cows than if that long fiber comes from a haycrop source.

POTATO LEAFHOPPER-RESISTANT ALFALFAS IN 1997

DAN UNDERSANDER
University of Wisconsin

Potato leafhopper is the insect now causing the greatest economic loss in alfalfa to most Wisconsin farmers.

Resistance to this insect has been widely promoted as a major breakthrough for alfalfa. The resistance is due to glandular hairs on the stem that physically inhibit the ability of leafhoppers to reproduce and may exude a substance that kills leafhoppers.

David Hogg, entomologist at the University of Wisconsin, has shown that the trait really does work–that potato leafhoppers will fail to reproduce on resistant plant and will eventually die.

However, released potato leafhopper resistant varieties have had mixed success in the field during 1997. Why? First, we need to recognize that we had the highest levels of potato leafhopper during 1997 of any of the last 10 years. This caused significant yield loss in both new seedlings and established stands. Our data would indicate that such stress on new varieties. Historically, we would have done all the research first and had many answers on release of varieties with new traits, but now, in the rush to get new traits to farmers, much of this information must be developed after the release. We learned this year that 60 percent resistance or more may be necessary for severe potato leafhopper infestations. Most of the varieties released last year are first generation varieties with 20 to 40 percent resistance. The lower resistance will still be helpful in years of lower infestation.

Further, the expression of the resistance may be affected by the environment and not always be present to the same extent.

Lastly, the resistance may be primarily to insect breeding and reproduction and be less effective against the first infestation of adults that come from the south. This may mean that the thresholds for spraying are different, and the number of sprayings are reduced for the season but not eliminated.

Many of the users of resistant varieties experience some level of potato leafhopper infestations, but will achieve some yield benefits.

I believe as we learn more about management of these varieties and gradually develop better varieties, we will find potato leafhopper resistance an indispensable tool in the production of alfalfa.

Yeager Receives PFGC Scholarship

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — The PFGC scholarship at Delaware Valley College was awarded to Jeremy Yeager of Chambersburg. Jeremy grew up on a dairy farm near Chambersburg and has recently worked for a crop consulting firm in Shippensburg.

The PFGC provides this scholarship to a Delaware Valley College student studying forages or forage-related subjects.

Highest PFGC Award

I've been a member for 34 years, been on the board for six years, was president a couple of times, and served on a couple of committees. I go to the meetings when I can. They deal with forage-related matters--better varieties, fertilizer, seed, equipment. The emphasis used to be mainly forages. Now it's pastures, too."

Jim and his wife, Pat, farm 220 acres in Ferguson Valley, Mifflin County. He plants 75 acres of corn, 80 acres of alfalfa, and some grass hay. Ten acres of pasture frame the front part of the barn. The dry cows pasture in five acres. He and his hired help of 10 years, Pam Bilger, milk 55 Holsteins for a 19,000-pound herd average.

"The best soil on our farm is Frankstown," Hostetter said. "We have some Edom silt loam and small amounts of Elliber and Huntingdon. I get five to six tons of forage, which is good for these soil types. The highest producers get six to eight tons per acres. I have scales that I used a lot, especially on yields that look good. That way we know exactly. One year, we had a three-acre piece of corn in the corn club, and we weighted all of the corn for total production."

Hostetter utilizes his 20-year-old manure pit to help manage manure in order to lower fertilizer costs. He believes he provides better feed for this cattle and can produce milk less expensively than with heavy grain feeding.

Hostetter's emphasis on forage began long before he started farming on his own. He was raised on a farm in Lancaster County, then moved to Mifflin County in 1953 and worked as a DHIA tester for 12 years. There Hostetter learned about forage production and was given information to be passed on to the farmer.

"Then for six or eight years, I participated in a state alfalfa growers contest. The object was to see how much quality alfalfa could be produced per acre. We had to keep complete costs of production, including machinery costs."

Fifteen years ago, spurred by his desire to conserve soil Hostetter purchased a no-till drill even though he couldn't find much information about no-tilling alfalfa. He remembers one time in particular when the soil and seed in a conventionally-tilled field washed away in a hard rain one hour after planting. Now he sows all his alfalfa no-till as soon as the ground is ready.

Last year, Hostetter tried a leafhopper-resistant variety and was please with the results. He planted more this year with a "we'll see" attitude.

"Even the best manager must deal with the variables associated with fertility, planting, and harvesting conditions, and weed and insect control. Forages are top-notch feeds for cattle and you're also raising a good conservation crop with little soil erosion. We're told often that we haven't reached full potential for forages."

SPRUCE CREEK (Huntingdon Co.) — The annual PFGC picnic is scheduled during Ag Progress Days, Wednesday, Aug. 19, at Wayne Harpster's Evergreen Farm near Spruce Creek.

PFGC will provide all the food, beverages, and fun. Bring your family. Served this year will be roast beef and pork, fresh vegetables, Lancaster County cantaloupes, and other goodies.

Cost is $8 per person if paid before Aug. 10 and $9 per person after Aug. 10. Children under 12 are free.

The picnic will be located at the Harpster's Evergreen Farm, about 7.5 miles west of Ag Progress Days on Rt. 45.

DOES LENGTH OF GRAZING PERIOD REALLY MATTER?

J.R. GERRISH
University of Missouri

Providing grazing managers with a better understanding of the interface of grazing animals with grasslands has been the goal of our research and education program over the past decade.

Maintaining efficient pasture and animal production in rotational grazing programs requires management decisions to be timely and on target.

We have conducted several studies where we have evaluated forage intake by grazing beef cattle on different types of pastures.

One of the areas we have focused on is how the length of the grazing period affects forage supply and consumption of forage by the grazing animal. Our results indicate that forage intake is maintained at desirable levels in grazing periods less than four days duration more readily than in longer grazing periods of up to 10 days.

On the average, forage supply should be maintained above 1,800 pounds per acre but a lower target can be used for grazing periods less than two days while a higher target must be maintainned for grazing periods longer than four days.

Knowing these types of relationships can allow cattle producers to do a better job of maintaining animal performance through changing pasture conditions.

although Bieber is using plastic twine to see how it works.

"In two days I can make hay, bale it, and dry it," said Bieber. "I've already baled hay at 8 in the morning when it was cloudy and wet." Bales as high as 40 percent moisture have been dried.

"But we got the hay and the hay was beautiful," he said.

The important factor, noted Bieber, is to ensure the hay is baled with the leaves on it. The nutrients in the leaves are essential for livestock — the protein content is improved.

Bieber said he got the ideas off "other fellows with driers," he said. "I combined these ideas in one design. But mine is more efficient than the others."

Other driers use about six gallons of oil per hour, but Bieber improved the drier's efficiency. Now he can dry hay at a cost of 32-40 cents per bale.

Bieber has about 12-15 customers for hay, including horse and goat farmers. He has clients from as far away as Philadelphia and in New Jersey. One client lives about 15-20 minutes away from New York City.

Bieber delivers about 10,000 bales of hay per year. The bigger customers purchase about 800 bales at any one time. "I have another who wants 1,500 bales," said Bieber.

Bieber has a machine shop at the farm and has custom-built hay wagons measuring 8 by 14, with a false backing to allow the handling of pallets. The wagon's sides are made of 1-inch black iron pipe and are removable.

Bieber farms with Dennis Newhard, and Dennis's son, Douglas. Bieber hopes that Dennis would take over the farm someday.

For information about the care of the hay acres, Bieber relies on the Lehigh Valley Crop Management Association to take soil samples and scout the fields for insect, weed, and disease pressures. Bieber attributed a lot of good information he picked up from the association and from Penn State to ensure the success of his hay drying operation.

Bieber's management of the crops is just as efficient.

Bieber delivers about 10,000 bales of hay per year. The bigger customers purchase about 800 bales at any one time. "I have another who wants 1,500 bales," said Bieber.

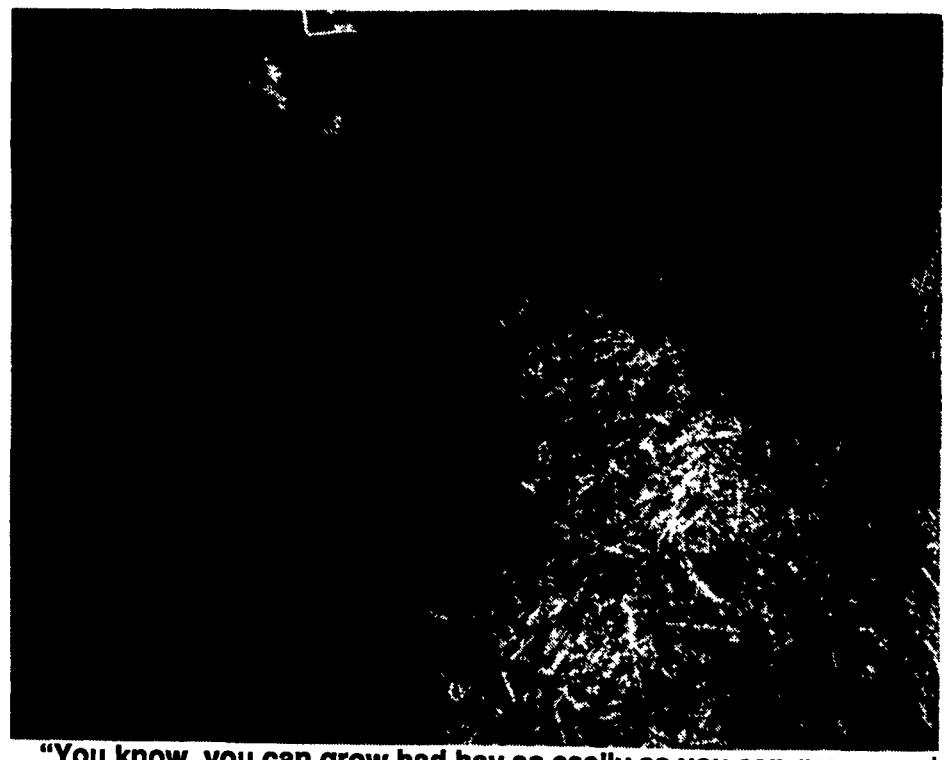
Bieber applies a dry fertilizer, 6-32-22, in early spring. The soil tests low for phosphorous and potash. After the first cutting, the fields are sprayed with a 10-20-10 fertilizer if they need it, about three gallons per acre and then the same amount after every cutting.

For weed control, Bieber relies on Velspar for broadleaf and grass control. They "try to get out in the early spring," said Bieber, but unsettled and almost constantly wet conditions kept them out of the fields for some time in the spring. The material had to be applied with a 35-foot boom sprayer late in the spring.

Insects — particularly alfalfa leafhopper and alfalfa weevil — are monitored through the association. They spray when insect challenges dictate.

First cutting occurred May 10 and continued through into June. The farm makes hay until late October and the beginning of November.

The problems faced this year, with a wet, cool spring, included stunting. The hay "went down from all the moisture," Bieber said, and browned out. Bieber said some of the evidence of the browning out from lack of sunlight showed up in some alfalfa bales.



"You know, you can grow bad hay as easily as you can grow good hay," says Bieber as he lifts a bale of alfalfa-orchardgrass back onto a pallet. But the Nazareth-area crops farmer points out that how hay is baled and dried down can alter the product's price substantially.

However, the orchardgrass "looked perfect this year," he said.

Bieber hopes to acquire additional leased acres — about another 30-40 — to add to his haymaking operation. He would continue with a 50-50 balance of pure alfalfa and the orchardgrass-alfalfa combinations.

For the alfalfa, Bieber used different varieties, including Doeblers, Beech Hardy, and AgriPro. For the first time, he used a special leafhopper-resistant variety from AgriPro and an orchardgrass-alfalfa mix from P.L. Rohrer. He's also using a Tekapo orchardgrass this year on one field.

Each year Bieber brings samples of his work to the Ag Progress Hay Show during Ag Progress Days in Rockspring, scheduled Aug. 18-20 this year. This is the seventh year he has entered the contest.

Bieber farms with his wife, Velma. He has been a member of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council for about seven years.

The hot air furnace takes in hot air from a connected structure and is taken through a "trench" underneath an 8-foot by 8-foot by 38-foot precast concrete-walled structure with an open roof. Here, Bieber inspects the trench with his dog, Mitze.

'Forage Suitability' Can Be Plotted

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Best results from those who want to begin grazing begin with planning. And producers who want to invest in a grazing system for their farm need to look at the details and come up with an overall plan that fits their soil conditions, livestock, climate, and other items specific to their operation.

Producers need to invest in an integrated forage livestock system, not just a grass grazing system, noted Edward B. Rayburn, extension forage agronomist with West Virginia University in Morgantown.

Rayburn spoke to more than 100 producers and grazing representatives earlier this year at the Grazing In the Northeast Workshop at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel and Convention Center in Camp Hill.

Graziers need to remember they are "harvesting sunlight and converting it to cash," Rayburn said. There is a science and an art to forage and livestock system management. "Managers need to understand the biology and ecology of the systems they are working with."

Until now, there has been little data about what types of soil conditions favor certain types of forage mixtures. However, work being undertaken by the USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) could change all that.

James B. Cropper, forage management specialist with the USDA NRCS at the Pasture Systems and Watershed Management Research Laboratory in University Park, spoke about forage suitability at the conference.

What kind of forages would be suitable for grazing? A new assessment procedure has been proposed by the University of Wisconsin Cooperative Extension and the NRCS Grazing Lands Technology Institute, according to Cropper.

The procedure rates the condition of a pasture site. The pasture condition rating worksheet is in early stages of development. Based on a Wisconsin extension publication, it rates the condition of a pasture based on the following characteristics: plant desirability, density, vigor, percent legume in the stand, uniformity of use, presence of sheet and rill erosion, stream bank and gully erosion, concentrated livestock areas, soil compaction, and site resilience. Plant vigor causative effects are soil fertility, soil pH, severity of livestock use, and forage species adaptation.

Another way to assess pastures is through forage suitability group (FSG) formulation and documentation in the NRCS "National Range and Pasture Handbook."

Not all areas have been documented at this time. However, one sample shown at the conference details an FSG for the eastern Allegheny Plateau and mountains. The FSG sheet provides detail for suitable forage crops based on deep, channery, well-drained, strongly acid, and moderately steep upland soils, consisting of Hartleton channery silt loam, Hazelton channery loam, and Leck Kill channery silt loam.

Provided are adapted forage species for the soil types and climatic conditions of those areas.

These tools, according to Cropper of NRCS, can help producers select species for forage production, what to use to get production, and specific management practices to sustain production.

In a short time, according to Cropper, "new tools will be ready to do an even greater job" of proper resource management," he noted.

According to Rayburn of West Virginia University, another vital link to improved forage systems is getting the right animal genetics.

"Animal genetics and herd health go a long way to make any grazing management program look good," Rayburn said.

ECONOMICS SURVEY OF GRAZING DAIRIES IN NORTHEAST OHIO

A study was conducted in northeast Ohio to collect economics data from dairy farms using Management Intensive Grazing (MIG). This study was part of a larger study looking at overall dairy farm businesses for the production years 1994 and 1995.

Net return per cow for the MIG farms in 1994 and 1995 was $447 and $468 respectively whereas the average for all farms (including MIG farms) showed $400 and $429 net returns. Averaged over both years, farms using MIG in generated gross farm incomes of $2,223 per cow compared to gross incomes of $2,581 per cow for all farms.

However, the total costs per cow was $1,765 for the MIG farms compared to $2,115 per cow for all farms.

Although the dairy farms utilizing MIG had lower gross incomes, the savings in total operating costs made MIG farms more profitable than the average of all farms in the study.

Why Test Forages For Quality?

DR. MARVIN HALL
Extension Forage Specialist
Penn State

Greater net profit is the bottom line for why livestock producers need to know the quality of the forages they are feeding!

Not knowing the exact quality of the forage being fed is a two-edged sword that can cut into profits either way it swings.

Table 1 presents a very simplistic example. However, the costs are real! A dairy producer who guesses that the crude protein (CP) content of the haylage is 2 percent units lower and corn silage is 1 percent lower will be feeding more supplemental protein than is necessary. This extra CP to the ration will add $0.09/cow/day in feed costs. With a herd of 100 cows, this is equivalent to $9/day. It would take just a little more than three days of not knowing the quality of the forages and feeding extra protein, as in this example, to pay for the cost of quality analyses (forage quality testing usually costs less than $15/sample).

The other edge of this two-edged sword cuts in to profits when forage quality is overestimated. Table 1, shows that estimating crude protein to be greater than it is results in adding insufficient supplemental protein to the ration and saving $0.06/cow/day in feed costs. Unfortunately, the cows are being "short changed" on CP which could have a negative impact on milk production, especially in early lactation.

Table 1. Costs associated with not knowing forage quality when balancing a dairy ration.

Situation	% crude protein in (dry matter basis) Haylage	Corn silage	Ration	$/cow/day	$/100 cows/day
Actual forage crude protein	19 3	8 8	16 0	2 72	272
Farmer estimates crude protein below actual and balances ration accordingly	17 3	7 8	16 9	2 81	281
Farmer estimates crude protein above actual and balances ration accordingly	21 3	9 8	15 0	2 66	266

RFV	CP	Auctions where quality was known
	%	$/ton
115	18	144

Guessing at fiber and mineral content will also have enormous economical impact. For example, the neutral detergent fiber NDF) content of forages helps determine how much of the forage an animal will consume. Guessing too high or too low can have tremendous implications on intake, animal performance, and health. Knowing the quality of the forage not only saves or makes more money, it also allows managers to provide better animal nutrition. Better animal nutrition will result in greater animal production and improved animal efficiency (lb milk or weight gain per pound of feed consumed).

Knowing the quality of forages when selling or buying them has also proven to be economically smart. This was confirmed at Pennsylvania hay auctions, where the quality of the hay is analyzed and the results posted on each load of hay prior to the auction. At these auctions, each percentage unit increase in crude protein resulted in $8 more per ton (Table 2). Selling 10 tons of 20 percent CP hay as 18 percent CP hay because the quality was not tested will cost the seller about $160! On the other hand, buying 10-ton 18 percent CP hay as 20 percent CP hay cost the buyer $160!

A similar relationship between quality and price did not occur at hay auctions when the quality of the hay was unknown. Establishing a "fair" price for hay, if you are buying or selling, means that both parties know the quality of the hay.

How Does Your Hay Compare?

Ever wonder how your hay compares to the best in Pennsylvania?

Well, there is still time to get your hay samples ready and enter them in the PFGC Hay Show at Ag Progress Days on Aug. 18-20.

The Hay Show is in the Crops and Soils Tent located at the end of East Fifth Street. By entering your hay in Hay Show at Ag Progress Days, you will automatically be entered in the Hay Show at the Farm Show next January. The show is not only fun, but you also will receive quality analysis for each sample entered.

Hay samples delivered to Ag Progress Days on Tuesday, Aug. 18 should be dropped off at the special Hay Sample Drop-Off Point located at the east entrance to Ag Progress Days. This drop-off point has been initiated to avoid difficulties of getting samples to the Hay Show Tent at its new location. Deadline for sample delivery is 10 a.m. Aug. 18.

RULES

1 Entries officially close at 10 00 a m , Tuesday, August 18, 1998 However, to facilitate handling of samples, exhibitors are urged to deliver their samples to the hay show tent on Monday, August 17

2 No entry fee will be charged

3 The hay shown must have been grown by the Exhibitor in Pennsylvania in 1998

4 Exhibitors may enter in as many classes as they wish, but no exhibitor shall make more than one entry in a class, either in his own name, the name of the farm, or the name of some other person

5 Exhibitors must attach an entry blank, giving name, address, county, social security number and class in which the exhibit is to be entered Exhibitors can secure additional entry blanks at their County Agricultural Extension Office

6 LONG HAY FROM RECTANGULAR BALES ONLY THAT HAS BEEN CURED (adequately dry) An exhibit shall consist of a bale section between 6 to 8 inches Undersized or moist samples will be disqualified PLEASE TIE THE SAMPLES WITH TWINE

7 Judging will be in two parts On Tuesday beginning at noon, samples will be judged on the basis of visual characteristics and tested for chemical analysis On Wednesday at 9 00 a m , the samples will be judged on the basis of visual and chemical characteristics

8 Unless disapproved by the exhibitor, samples will be stored for exhibit in the Hay Show at the 1999 Pennsylvania Farm Show

PREMIUMS

1st - $5 00 plus ribbon and forage analysis
2nd - $3 00 plus ribbon and forage analysis
3rd - $1 00 plus ribbon and forage analysis
4th Ribbon and forage analysis
5th - Ribbon and forage analysis

A special plaque will be awarded to the Champions of each section

High-performance Haybine®

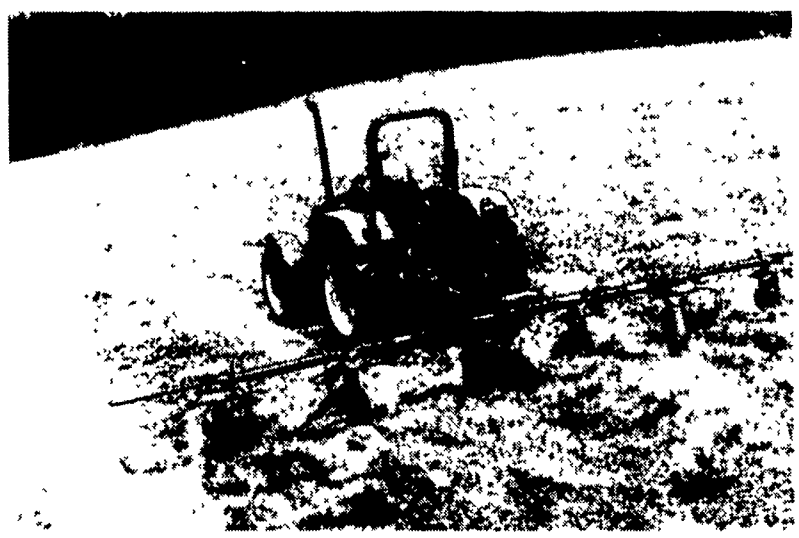
The New Holland Model 1465 Haybine® mower-conditioner has a five-bat reel for more uniform crop flow into the nine-foot cutter bar. The "1465" provides fast reaction time to field obstructions and has an enclosed wobble gearbox for smooth, dependable operation.

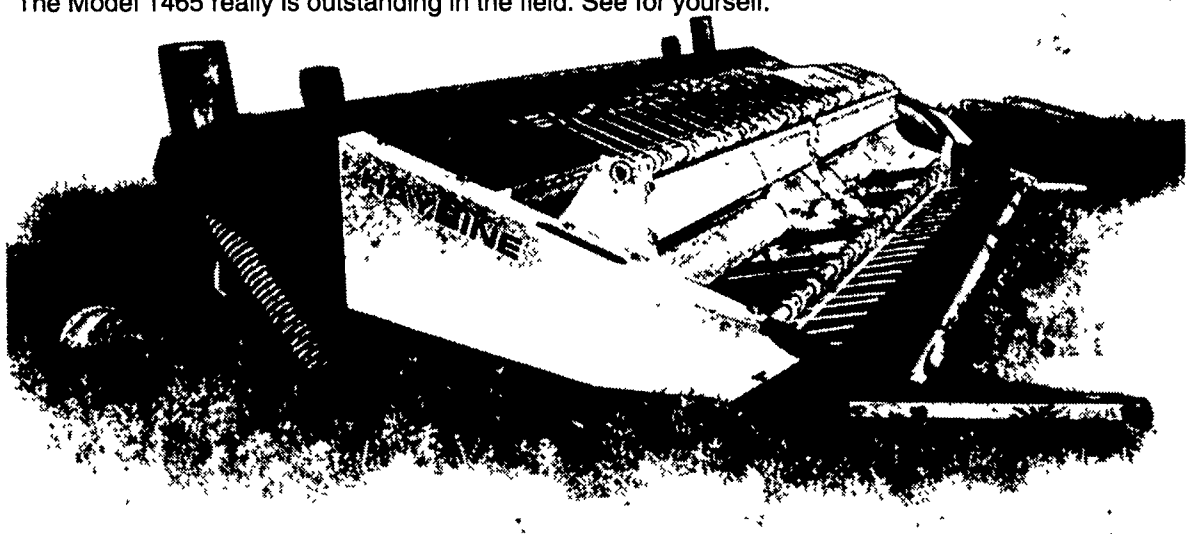
Other proven advantages include:

- Conditioner roll drives with straight spline telescoping shafts for extra durability
- A spring-loaded reel drive idler for improved performance, added header durability and less maintenance.
- A cutterbar assembly with square back-bar guards, adjustable hold-downs, and a back-hardened knife assembly for long wear and less maintenance

NEW HOLLAND

The Model 1465 really is outstanding in the field. See for yourself.





Fluff 3 windrows in one pass

You'll cover acres fast, and bale or chop sooner with the Model 169 tedder. It uses six rotors to ted a wide 22'8" area. That's wide enough to fluff three windrows from a 9' mower-conditioner. Yet transport width is a narrow 9'8" for easy maneuvering. The frame of the "169" is fully articulated, so it hugs the ground to fluff all of your crop for fast drying.

And the Digidrive® coupling provides smooth, reliable operation.

Beat the weather with the model 169. Stop by for details.

The Leafcutting Bee — Alfalfa's Premier Pollinator

RICK AMES
Seed Production Agronomist
W-L Research

Successful alfalfa seed production requires a pollinator. The three major pollinators used in commercial alfalfa seed production in North America are the alfalfa leafcutting bee, the alkali bee, and the honey bee.

The alfalfa leafcutting bee, Megachile rotundata, is often considered the "best" alfalfa pollinator for reasons outlined below. Even at an annual cost of $150-200 per acre, it is the pollinator of choice in many alfalfa seed production areas.

However, there are a number of insects, diseases and other pest problems unique to the leafcutter bee which can negatively impact this pollinator.

A Managaeable, Proficient Pollinator

The alfalfa leafcutting bee is a very efficient pollinator of alfalfa. This bee aggressively works the flowers, causing them to trip and release pollen which the bee collects and transfers from flower to flower.

The leafcutter bee's four to six weeks of pollination life allows plenty of time for large numbers of flowers to be pollinated, resulting in high yields of seed. One female can pollinate up to 10,000 flowers, yielding up to ¼ pound of seed.

Controlling where the bees will pollinate is accomplished by placement of bees in or near a target alfalfa field which has plenty of desirable bloom. They will quickly nest in trailer-mounted, man-made domiciles, making movement between fields possible.

Since the alfalfa leafcutting bee prefers to work close to its nest, it will not leave the field if conditions are good. Also, alfalfa bloom is by far its favorite source of pollen and nectar, so competition from other crops or weeds is not a problem.

Threats To Leafcutter Health

There are many parasite and predator problems that attack the alfalfa leafcutting bee. These include parasitic wasps and predacious beetles. However, the alfalfa leafcutting bee is very sensitive to insecticides, and few insecticides have been found that provide control of alfalfa seed insect pests with minimal losses to the leafcutter bee.

There are also a number of diseases that infect the alfalfa leafcutting bee. The worst disease is a fungus called chalkbrood that attacks the larval stage of the bee. Some birds can also cause significant loss by feeding on the adult bees. These pests can all be held to manageable levels by use of cultural, chemical, or biological control methods.

Determining Larval Health Through X-Ray Photography

Accurately determining the numbers of leafcutter bees available for pollination is accomplished through quality evaluation of the bee larvae during the winter. Bees on hand are first evaluated to determine actual numbers of live larvae. If more bees are needed, they are purchased in the larval form. Each larva is encased in its own cell constructed primarily of leaf material. A particular cell must be cut open to evaluate whether healthy or dead larvae are inside.

Another method is by X-ray, which will show what is inside the cell without manually cutting it open. The X-ray method is faster and easier when looking at hundreds of cells in a single sample of a particular lot of bees. The X-ray will reveal live larvae, dead larvae, immature larvae, parasites, and pollen balls.

Knowing the number of live larvae in a sample makes it possible to calculate how many bees can be expected from a particular lot.

Summary

The alfalfa leafcutter is the pollinator of choice in many alfalfa seed production areas.

There are many factors which impact the health of leafcutter bees, but the use of X-ray photography can allow growers to accurately determine how many healthy pollinators will emerge from a lot of cells.

Dairy Graziers Not Exempt From Expansion

COLUMBUS, Ohio – Switching to intensive grazing could delay the need for dairy farmers to expand, but not forever, said Tom Noyes, dairy agent at the Wayne County office of Ohio State University Extension.

Changing from a conventional dairy to intensive grazing has the potential to increase a dairy farmer's profit per cow by $30 to $50. For a 100-cow dairy, this could mean a $5,000 per year increase in income that could maintain a dairy farmer's current standard of living for five to 10 years.

But, if profit per cow is not improved in other ways, cost of living increases eventually will overcome the financial benefits of grazing, and dairy graziers will have to consider expanding their herd, Noyes said.

To maintain a standard of living, dairy farm profits must grow by 60 percent over 10 years. Even with improved genetics, adoption of new technology and increased efficiency, the increase in net profit often cannot keep up with inflation.

"Unless dairy farmers can find some way to increase profit per cow every year, they will eventually need to expand," Noyes said. "If dairy producers adopted management intensive grazing because they think it will prevent their need to expand, then they are mistaken."

Expanding a grazing operation should be easier than expanding a conventional dairy, if a grazier has pasture space available, he said. A grazing system requires less housing, so adding cows can be done inexpensively.

Spring is the best time for dairy graziers to expand their herd because that's when the most grass is available in pastures.

LATE SUMMER ALFALFA SEEDING TIME IS NEAR

Warren C. Thompson
National Forage Specialist
AgriPro Seeds Inc.

Heavy rains and cooler-than-normal temperatures throughout most of the Northeast (and the nation as a whole) has caused many farmers to miss or greatly reduce their spring alfalfa seedings this year.

Seedings can be quite successful when made in the late summer and early fall. Problems is seeding this time of year hinge on getting the ground ready and the seed in the ground early to grow sufficiently to counter harsh weather and possible disease invasions.

Is there an accepted prescription for success at this season? I doubt it — depends on who's talking. But there are some practices that successful farmers have been using for years that help.

1. Seed early. Alfalfa needs six to eight weeks of growing time before a hard freeze. This gives the plants time to grow and get robust enough to withstand ravages of winter and normally resist invasion of slow growth and week plant related diseases, especially sclerotinia crown and stem rot. Then the following spring/early summer, harvests will expect to be much more abundant and ready to harvest in the desired stages of maturity for high quality hay, silage, and grazing. Seedings made later than the above window should be delayed until next spring. Should the ground be prepared and ready for seeding and the moisture is not present, thus delaying seeding, an option is to seed winter wheat at 75 percent of normal rate for winter cover. Then in the spring, no-till seed the alfalfa into the wheat following the no-till prescription found at your county extension office.

2. Before even planning a seeding date — test the soil and apply the needed lime and fertilizers recommended. The ideal pH for alfalfa is 6.5 to 7.5. If the pH is lower than this but not lower than 6.2, you might want to consider using 500 to 1,000 pounds of finely ground or hydrated lime lightly worked into the soil ahead of seeding to "hold the seeding" until the recommended rates of ag lime has time to alter the pH to the desired level.

3. If you ar making a seeding "from scratch," prepare a clean, well-firmed seedbed that will retain moisture and help you prevent burying the seed. By the way, seed depth should be no more than eight times the thickness of the seed. That means ¼ to ½ inch is the ideal depth for this region. Of course, it is not necessary to remind folks in Pennsylvania and surrounding states that contour seedings help prevent erosion. Nurse crops usually interfere with abundant alfalfa growth and uniform stands. But is often necessary to help prevent excessive runoff and sheet erosion. Just keep the seeding rate reasonable to avoid choking or smothering the alfalfa. In the spring, why not remove the small grain (preferably winter wheat) for silage early to reduce as much late competition as possible on the alfalfa?

BOOST SILAGE MILEAGE

CHEMGRO SI2000

Making great silage and haylage isn't easy. You have to beat the weather, the natural ups and downs of good and bad crop years, mold, and spoilage. Then you have to worry about what it cost you to feed silage for the value you received.

Chemgro silage inoculants SI 2000 and SI 2000ws can eliminate a lot of the guesswork. Designed to allow you to choose dry or water applications, either products will add quality and silage mileage no matter what your crop.

You get fast-dropping ph, rapidly-rising lactic acid production, and quicker fermentation than you find in both untreated silage or crops treated with other inoculant brands.

The result is silage that is more palatable for the cows, higher in total nutrients, and that contains more total digestible dry matter - a higher return on your investment.

Call us today to find out more about Chemgro SI 2000 and SI 2000ws silage inoculants and applicators.

4. Seeding rates vary by regions and from farm to farm. Rates are increasing around most of the country — up to 20-30 percent higher than normal. Why? It seems farmers have decided (and found) that as stands thin with age (and they do thin), the thicker stands seem to remain more uniform and battle weeds and grass intrusion with greater success than more conservative rates.

5. Do not harvest fall seedings until next spring or summer for either hay, silage, or grazing. Give the plants a chance to establish themselves. That takes time.

In summary:

Summer fallow and produce a firm seedbed.

Test the soil and apply needed lime and fertilizers accordingly.

Control erosion where it applies.

Dilute potential carryover herbicides used in row crop production by extra disking if needed.

Use a seeding rate to provide a dense cover that thwarts weeds.

Seed six to eight weeks ahead or historic freeze dates. If irrigation water is available, a good soaking during a drought will really help get better growth to go into the winter.

Hold off harvest until next spring/summer.

Pick the varieties that best suit your program. Up to now, I have said nothing about grazing alfalfa and valid multipurpose alfalfas. They are real and widely accepted. Check with your seed dealer or your county agent or a university extension forage specialist to help you select the one(s) for your farm.

PFGC Accepts Memberships

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) has announced new membership rates for 1998.

The Council, with your membership and support, can accomplish much toward a better forage industry, environment, and community.

It's a big challenge and the PFGC needs your help. By becoming a member now, PFGC can serve an even more active role in support of the forage industry.

The PFGC, formed in 1960, is made up of individuals and organizations that are interested in forage and grassland-based agriculture. The PFGC is dedicated to the production and utilization of quality forage and grassland.

The PFGC works in a variety of ways to promote the industry, through publication of Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland News, through the publication of Foraging Around, and sponsoring individual workshops, training events, field days, Ag Progress Days, leadership, and other activities.

Every member receives the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland News, the Hay and Forage Grower magazine, and a PFGC membership directory.

PASTURE PONDERINGS

DUANE E. PYSHER
Grassland Management Specialist

Conservation Service

One of my Grazing Lands Conservation Initiative (GLCI) board members recently sent me a magazine article and he covered up the date. He told me to read it and then uncover the date.

Except for a few references to production levels of the cows, it would pass for an article that could be written today. I will try and provide you with a few quotes from the article and then you be the judge of the dateline on this story. The story, entitled "Can you outproduce this all-grass farm?" was written by Harry R. O'Brien about a dairy farmer by the name of Jim McGee.

- "Jim McGee makes more milk on his 75-acre all-grass farm than most folks produce on 300. He spends his time raising high quality hay or taking care of the cows and he lets others farmers raise his grain and bedding."
- "Rotational grazing on fertilized grass-legume mixtures keeps production high during the summer."
- "An upright silo stands empty — 'I quit making silage when my last hired man left to work in a factory,' McGee says."
- "McGee has developed a farming system that uses a minimum amount of labor. He figures its the only way he could handle 75 animals on 75 acres and do all the work himself. An all-grass operation cuts down on the investment in machinery and depreciation. But best of all, it leaves McGee with enough time to get the most out of his cows."
- "The profit above feed cost is so high he doesn't want me to give the figures here. But I'll say this much — it's the highest I have come across in 35 years of farm reporting."

Does this sound like something you have just read in Lancaster Farming or some other popular farm publication? I think so. It speaks very highly of grass-based or a forage-based dairy operation and the reduction in feed costs that can come about from such a system. In fact, this is the same type of story you hear told at grazing conferences, pasture walks, and the like.

McGee typifies many modern-day dairy farmers who have turned to grasses and a forage-based system as a way of reducing feed costs to make and keep their dairy operation economically viable in today's agricultural scene. However, McGee was doing this in 1955 and this story was printed in Better Farming in June 1955.

So what happened in U.S. agriculture that caused most farmers to do just the opposite of McGee and confine their animals and bring the feed to them? The ability of the farmer to purchase machinery to do what hired labor was doing caused much of this. Just as McGee's hired man went to work in a factory, so did many others.

Labor costs were high after WW II and advances in farm mechanization were happening rapidly. Research in the making and use of stored feeds also helped pave the way for dairy producers to be able to better feed their herds and produce more milk.

However, these things all come with a cost. McGee, in 1955, found those costs to be high, so he opted for a grass-based dairy operation to keep his operation economically viable.

It is these same high feed costs that many of today's dairy farmers are still facing. They are now realizing what McGee concluded more than 40 years ago. That conclusion was that adopt-

What Do These Graziers Do When The 'Summer Slump' Arrives?

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — A Middletown dairy producer with Jersey cows summed up his equipment needs rather succinctly: a three-wheeler to open up the gates for his grazing cows, a forage cutter, and cows.

That's it.

Like many graziers who have been operating successfully for years, Tom Williams of Bryncoed Farm, Middletown, and others who spoke at the Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference in March believe that with grazing, cows are healthier — and the owners are, too.

"We make livestock work for us — we don't work for them," said Lawrason Sayre, owner of Waffle Hill Farm in Churchville, Md., who spoke at the conference.

"I really believe that, the longer I'm (using rotational grazing), the more I'm convinced that grass and short grains are the way to go," said Nevin Mast, who operates a farm in Oley.

However, all the producers realize that while rotational grazing can mean improved herd health with less overhead costs, there are still management practices necessary to get through the difficult summer slumps.

Mast purchased the farm in the mid-1970s which at the time contained 45 milk cows and 40 young stock on the 120-acre farm 12 miles east of Reading, Berks County. At the time, the family planted 50 acres of corn and the same in alfalfa, with approximately 20 acres in permanent pasture. They also double-cropped 20 acres of rye.

The cows were milked in a tiestall barn and everything was fed from silos, including high moisture corn, haylage, and corn silage for dry cows and heifers. In 1982, the dairy milked 23,000 pounds on their herd average and then put in a TMR mixer.

On the suggestion of the consultant, more inputs were added to boost production. However, Mast noted that profits were short-lived because of the failing health of the cattle, heart attacks, misplaced abomasums, and foot and reproduction problems. Feed and vet bills were subsequently higher.

In the early 1990s, Mast went to a meeting where he found out about grazing. Soon after, a grazing program began at the farm with 15 acres of pastureland with high tensile fence.

Paddocks were set up. Additionally, about 5-10 acres of new pasture were added per year.

For the summer slump days, milk cows were left in the barn during daytime heat and fed haylage from silos. For the milk cows, each day's feeding came mostly from silos during the summer. During the day, dry cows and heifers were the follower group in the paddocks.

To supplement feed because of dry, droughty weather the past year, the farm added several acres of sundangrass planted in mid-May at approximately 40-50 pounds per acre. They began feeding about July 1 and the grass regrew every 10 days through mid-September. Cows went in when the grass was knee-high and took it right down the ground, he said.

Mast noted that he had never tried sudangrass before. "I like to try a little bit before putting the cows on it," he indicated.

They had eight feedings off of if every 10 days. He never clipped it.

This year, the Masts started grazing spelt.

In November, no-tilled rye was planted into the sudangrass field. This will be used for spring feeding.

Mast told the graziers at the conference to get the animals out there "as early as possible to graze." He has begun testing some grazing corn fields to see what kind of reception they will have on the farm.

Tom Williams of Middletown manages 130 milking cows and 45 dry and pregnant heifers on his Jersey farm. In addition, he cares for 80 heifers and 20 calves. The farm name, Bryncoed, is based on a Welsh word meaning "hill and trees."

When Williams realized he would have to speak at the conference on the topic of "summer slump," he had a question: was it the slump of the "animal, grass, or the farmer?"

Williams manages 75-140 acres of pasture bluegrass, orchardgrass, bromegrass, barcel fescue, red canary, alfalfa, clovers, and rye. He also maintains 130 acres in corn, 70 in silage, and 60 acres of high moisture ear corn.

Bryncoed also features 100 acres of alfalfa grass silage, hay, and pasture, and 35 acres in rye silage, early straw, grain, and green manure.

Williams begins grazing between April 10-25 and stops from Nov. 1-Dec. 23. Milk cows have 30 to 50 lots, 60 acres plus hay and corn. Dry cow and pregnant heifers have 11-17 lots at 1-1.5 acres per lot.

For the summer, the milking herd is fed TMR once a day after afternoon milking a sufficient amount to have some left for morning consumption after morning milking before going to pasture. In the winter, TMR is fed twice a day.

Grazing conference speakers, from left, Forrest Stricker, Berks County grazier; Titus Martin of Ti-Lin Holsteins, Fayetteville; and Jerry M. Swisher, Jr., extension agent in dairy science from Virginia Tech.

In the summer, dry cows are fed silage once a day in the evening — the amount is determined by the pasture quantity.

Winter feed is 2.5 pounds per day of coarse hay with silage in the evening. Grain is fed at one pound per head per day in the morning.

Water is available in most milk cow lots from a ¾ -inch low-cost black plastic line. Tanks contain floats and hold between 100-150 gallons.

Fence posts are made out of fiberglass. The wire is single-strand outside metal wire. Divider is a nine-strand polywire.

Williams attempts to handle summer slump by varying the pasture or mixed silage while keeping the grain constant. The cows move over the lots quicker, assuming forage matures sooner during hot or dry weather.

The fields contain an orchardgrass/clover/alfalfa mix or a Ky. 31/clover/alfalfa mix. All are seeded no-tilled.

The three most important things in using a grazing system are "flexibility, flexibility, flexibility," Sayre said.

Today, Waffle Hill Farm includes 112 aces of grass/legume hay/grazing land, with another 28 acres of rented ground for haymaking. One-hundred and ten acres are in permanent pasture.

Waffle Hill is home to 140 registered Angus cows and heifers and 120 are calved out from December to February. Calves are carried through to yearlings. They use two Angus bulls and AI.

This past drought year was especially challenging to Sayre.

❖ PRESIDENT'S CORNER ❖

PAUL H. CRAIG
President, PFGC

As president of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grasslands Council (PFGC) for 1998, hello to everyone. Let me tell you a little about myself.

I have been member of this ambitious group of farmers, industry representatives, and educators called PFGC for nearly 20 years. In that time I have attended many local and state events sponsored, promoted or conduct by the Forage Council throughout the state.

As an extension agent I have assisted PFGC members to conduct forage grass and alfalfa research trials that have been used by many forage producers across the state. I have worked with other PFGC members at pasture walks, forage conferences, speaking contests, hay contests, and in-depth training schools.

Earlier in my extension career I was fortunate to receive financial support to develop educational materials that have been utilized to increase forage production efficiency. I have also spent many hours in discussions with the leaders in forage production in Pennsylvania. I have gained a wealth of knowledge and experience as a result of the opportunity that PFGC has given me. Now as president I hope to work with the board of directors to continue to keep PFGC active.

Many times individuals are asked to make a contribution and join an organization. I would ask you to consider joining our organization, the Pennsylvania Forage and Grasslands Council - the reasons are many. The council is the only state organization that provides an opportunity for forage producers, industry representatives, and educators to work together to strengthen the forage industry of Pennsylvania. Research trials, equipment demonstrations, field days, marketing, local producer recognition, and promotion of responsible agricultural practices are just a few of the activities of the Forage Council. Get involved. At Ag Progress Days, you can enter the 1998 Hay show sponsored by PFGC.

Start collecting entries now. There should be a lot of excellent first-cutting samples.

As Progress Days is also the time of the year when PFGC holds its annual picnic. This event is held rain or shine on Wednesday evening, Aug. 19, near the Ag Progress Day site. Food is served at about 6:30 p.m., but attendees usually arrive earlier to enjoy good conversations and to relax along the banks of Spruce Creek. There is a reservation fee of $8. If you are coming up to APD and would like to attend the picnic, drop a note to the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, Attn. Picnic; P.O. Box 355, Hershey PA, 17033. Registration information will be sent.

At Ag progress Days at the Hay Show you will be able to pick up a PFGC membership application. I would encourage you to join. The opportunities that result as a membership in PFGC are worth a lot more than the membership fee. My experiences with this group of men and women has been very rewarding I urge you to participate.

'Summer Slump'

Had they been still growing corn, the farm would have been left "high and dry," Sayre noted. They had good moisture in the spring and excellent grazing, and had a first cutting of hay. They wanted to get another cutting and fulfill their storage requirements.

However, it soon turned dry. Where normally they would achieve 2-3 cuttings and then graze the hay fields in September and October, last year they had to graze most of what would have been second cutting hay ground in July and August. The pastures simply weren't recovering as they do normally.

This flexibility, key to successful grazing, saved them from taking drastic steps, Sayre noted — either start feeding or sell the cattle.

Stocking rate for the 3-4 different herds runs 25,000-35,000 pounds of live weight per acre. The cattle will make about 300 moves through 65-70 paddocks during the grazing season.

All this flexibility is made possible when using electric fence, polywire, tread-in posts, and a portable watering system, he noted. The watering system consists of a submersible well-pump in a 6-inch PVC pipe sleeve lying in the side of the pond and a small pressure tank supplying a 1-inch black plastic line lying on top of the ground under the fence. At various points in this line, they "T" off plastic ball vales with garden hose snap-in couplers. "We can then snap in garden hose (up to 250 feet at times) to feed the Cool-Spring tanks," he noted. "These tanks are on 4x4 skids so we can drag them from paddock to paddock. This way we eliminate long lanes and the manure is distributed more evenly."

It's important for cattle breeders or feeders who want to use grazing to select the right type of cattle for a particular grazing situation.

"Go to a herd where the cows are raised in the type of environment you're going to put them in," Sayre said.

Along with using more forage ground also comes the responsibility of what to do with the excess nitrogen generated.

In the past, nutrients were disposed of on corn ground, where they were readily available to the plant. But "our ability to put manure on corn ground is not like it used to be," said Les Lanyon, Penn State.

Lanyon spoke at the conference about the challenges in nutrient management faced by graziers.

A big challenge is how to "convince animals not to congregate," said Lanyon. "Where they hang out is where the manure accumulates."

The issue is: how to redistribute the manure so the available nutrients can be allocated where needed.

Lanyon offered the following manure application guidelines:

- Apply manure at low rates.
- Spread the manure as evenly as possible. Avoid clumping and uneven distribution.
- Avoid critical runoff areas — streams, drainage ways, and unprotected wells.
- Apply manure soon after harvest or grazing for established perennials.
- Avoid application with heavy equipment when soils are wet to prevent compaction.
- Record applications and balance nutrient requirements with manure nutrients available.
- Maintain nutrient balance in fields and pastures. Soil test regularly and watch magnesium levels for grazing animals.

Others who spoke at the conference include Jerry M. Swisher, Jr., extension agent in dairy science from Virginia Tech; Titus Martin of Ti-Lin Holsteins, Fayetteville; and Forrest Stricker, Berks County grazier.

Swisher spoke about how dairies are using rotational grazing as an opportunity for producers "to reduce cost as well as increase their net cash farm income."

Martin, who maintains a Holstein farm four miles east of Chambersburg, spoke about how grazing leads to "more profit — less work. It's great."

And Stricker provided an overview of how grazing has "a $406 per cow advantage over confinement, even though milk production is down 2,912 pounds per cow."

ing an all-grass or forage-based system of dairy production can lower labor inputs and feed costs while allowing the farmer to concentrate on getting the most out of his cows.

Today we can also lower our feed costs and help our shrinking bottom line through the adoption of a forage-based dairy system in which we use rotational grazing as the major component in feeding our herd during the growing season. We can purchase feed supplements as needed to provide the energy and other nutrients necessary to maximize production in a forage-based system.

Rotational grazing is not a new idea or concept but one that we are revitalizing and expanding. It is apparent that New Zealand and Europe were quicker to realize that rotational grazing was the way to keep their livestock industry economically viable. This resurrected article from Better Farming made me think about why U.S. farmers went away from all-grass farming. Our movement toward these types of systems today are not new and innovative but just a reintroduction and expansion of the old.

For information on rotational grazing systems or its many components, contact me at (717) 237-2221 or at NRCS, Suite 340, One Credit Union Place, Harrisburg, PA 17110-2993.

root system because of toxins injected into the stems by the leafhopper. The result will be stunting, less regrowth, lower winter survival, and new seedlings can be killed. Yield losses may be as high as 40 percent in the seeding year and 15 percent for established stands.

Until recently, all alfalfa varieties have been highly susceptible to potato leafhopper and many farmers have been forced to apply several insecticide sprays per year. The cost for scouting and insecticide can easily be $10 or more for each application per acre. This expense, in addition to lost quality, tonnage, reduced stands, and milk or meat production adds up rapidly. PLH is truly the number one pest of alfalfa.

In 1997, the first alfalfa varieties with true resistance to potato leafhopper were introduced by seed companies under several tradenames. Regardless of the tradename, all leafhopper resistant varieties received the resistance trait from a "wild" type of alfalfa. Resistant varieties have small hairs on stems and leaves which produce a substance that discourages leafhopper feeding and reproduction. Truly leafhopper resistant varieties should not be confused with those which are advertised as being "tolerant to yellowing." Varieties which are tolerant to yellowing might simply use dark green color to hide the yellowing. Damage from the leafhopper may not be apparent but it occurs nonetheless.

What have we learned about PLH-resistant varieties? What more do we need to know? Are PLH-resistant varieties right for your farm?

These are some good questions. We have learned quite a lot in the year since first seedings were made but there are still many questions. New spring seedings in 1997 had to prove themselves under severe leafhopper pressure and drought. It was a rough test with mixed results.

We know that the PLH resistance trait is providing protection from leafhopper damage. Growers reported less yellowing and stunting when compared to normal varieties. University trials which were not sprayed have shown significantly higher yields for PLH resistant varieties when compared to normal varieties under leafhopper pressure.

We have learned that PLH resistance does not mean total immunity. Heavy leafhopper pressure such as occurred last year can be so great that even resistant varieties may need to be sprayed occasionally. As always, protection of new seedings should be a priority until establishment.

We also learned that not all PLH resistant varieties are "created equal." Some varieties may have higher levels of resistance to PLH than others. University data and field reports seem to show resistance differences. In fact, some commercial varieties are advertised as "resistant" and others as "highly resistant."

In 1998, established stands should provide whole year data on PLH resistance, spray cost reduction, forage quality and yield. Eastern Universities are continuing to test PLH resistant varieties and more trials will be established.

With all these questions, should you plant PLH-resistant alfalfa? I believe that most information about PLH resistant alfalfa is very positive and that it will be beneficial on farms where PLH is a yearly pest. The resistance trait will also provide good insurance in areas where leafhopper damage occurs occasionally and where spraying is not done but damage occurs. In my opinion, the risks are low and the benefits are high with leafhopper resistant alfalfa, as long as the variety is otherwise well adapted to your farm.

Nominate An Award Winner

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — PFGC sponsors several awards to acknowledge outstanding performance by forage producers and those who work with forage producers.

These awards are described in this issue.

Look over the different awards and nominate qualified persons (you can nominate yourself) to be considered for an award.

Marvin Hall of Penn State serves as the contact person for the awards committee. He welcomes inquires for more details on any of these awards. Hall can be reached at (814) 863-1019.

Objective of the Awards Program

Recognize individuals in Pennsylvania who have made an outstanding contribution to some aspect of forage and grassland improvement in the state. Awards are made annually when there is a worthy candidate. Presentation of awards will be made in November at the annual forage conference and meeting of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council.

Award Categories

PFGC's Special Award

This Special Award is the highest recognition given by PFGC. It is presented to an individual who has made a major contribution directly to the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council as well as an outstanding contribution to Pennsylvania's forage and livestock industry and/or conservation farming. The recipients' contribution may have been in production agriculture, industry, research, extension, teaching, or other public service.

Research/Extension/Teaching Award

This award is presented to an individual affiliated with either Penn State University, Delaware Valley College or the USDA Pasture Laboratory at University Park, PA who has made an outstanding contribution to forage and grassland agriculture in areas of research, extension or teaching. No more than one award will be presented annually.

Forage/Conservation Farmer Award

This is a joint award of PFGC and the Keystone Chapter of the Soil and Water Conservation Society of America. It is presented to a Pennsylvania farmer who has demonstrated superior skills in the development and implementation of an outstanding soil and water conservation program utilizing appropriate forage and conservation species as well as other approved conservation practices.

Conservation Award

This Conservation Award is presented to an individual in Pennsylvania, other than a grassland farmer, who has made an outstanding contribution in the area of soil and water conservation emphasizing the use of forage and conservation species. The contribution may have been in research, teaching, extension, or other areas of leadership, such as agency personnel, in the promotion or implementation of improved conservation practices.

Outstanding Pasture Producer Awards

This award category was established to recognize outstanding producers throughout Pennsylvania who effectively use pastures as a major component of their forage-livestock system. This awards will be presented on behalf of AFGC (American Forage and Grassland Council) to Pennsylvania producers who have been declared winners in Pennsylvania's competitive program. Nominator and nominee may be asked to complete a more detailed questionnaire about the producer's pasture operation.

Making Nominations

Nominations can be made by any member, group of members, or persons affiliated with the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council by completeing the nomination form on the reverse side of this brochure. Active participation by both the nominator and nominee in making nominations is encouraged. Nominations should be in writing and should be sent to:

PFGC Awards Committee
116 ASI Building
Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA 16802

by no later than October 1. Nominations should include the name, address and a brief statement on the nominees major contributions to Pennsylvania's forage and grassland agriculture in the area for which the individual is nominated. Additional letters in support of the nominee are welcome and should be included with the nomination.

INFLUENCE OF SOIL TEXTURE ON ALFALFA AUTOTOXICITY

J.A. JENNINGS and C.J. NELSON
University of Missouri

A rotation interval is recommended between alfalfa stands to avoid negative effects of autotoxicity. Differences in soil properties such as texture can strongly influence allelopathic expression in plants and may explain the large variation in research results and recommended rotation intervals among states.

A laboratory experiment was conducted to determine the influence of soil texture on alfalfa autotoxicity. Alfalfa extracts were passed through leaching columns filled with topsoil of either Sarpy fine sandy loam or Carlow silty clay foam and leachates were collected. Leachates were added to 50 alfalfa seed in petri dishes.

Radicle length and percentage germination were measured after 3 days. Leachates reduced radicle growth more than percentage germination in both soils. The autotoxic chemical or chemicals moved through the Sarpy soil faster than through the Carlow soil.

Fifty percent more water was required to move the autotoxic leachate through the clay-foam than the sandy-loam soil. The results indicate that similar amounts of the autotoxic factor in sandy soil will have a greater influence on alfalfa seedling growth than in the clay soil.

Conversely, the same amount of rainfall will leach the autotoxic factor from a sandy soil while only diluting it in a clay soil. Soil texture and rain water interact to affect length of rotation intervals needed for successful reseeding of alfalfa.

Field research is needed to determine if rotation intervals can be modified based on soil texture and irrigation or expected rainfall.

If you've been looking for a combine that's big on features, your search is over. Because the new GLEANER® Silver Series rotary combines are designed to give you big advantages and more. Take our large cleaning shoe, for example. It's the longest in the industry. With an adjustable chaffer and sieve to ensure proper cleaning and even finer separation. And if you carry extra large headers, our redesigned final drives have the strength to bear the load, while the load-carrying axle gives you the added support needed for large bin capacities. The optional turret style unloading system, available on the R62 and R72, has an extra long reach auger, giving you additional clearance height when unloading into large trucks and grain carts. It also makes it easier to unload on-the-go and while working on uneven terrain.

But our extra large features don't stop there. The GLEANER ComforTECH® Cab is roomier than any available, and has creature comforts like a luxury air-ride seat, a heating and air conditioning system and a CB radio hookup, just to name a few. Plus, with 62 square feet of solar glass, 13% more than any other combine, you'll get a clear, unobstructed view of your crops.

For an even bigger picture, stop by and see us today. And get a combine that's engineered to help you get bigger returns.

BALE A TON EVERY 3 MINUTES

More and more farmers are making hay the big way. More farmers are buying square balers from Hoober, Inc. With three models to choose from, the reasons to buy a CASE IH big square baler are clear:

Productivity

CASE IH big square bales are quick to handle, and that means you can be more productive. In fact, with a CASE IH big square baler you can bale up to 20 tons of hay per hour. And there's no stopping to tie and eject bales. That's 1 ton every 3 minutes.

Shipping

CASE IH big square bales give you large transport payload. Since bales are stackable, you can fit more hay into a limited area. The bottom line is more bales of hay per truckload.

High Moisture Capability

CASE IH 8575 & 8585 big square balers are built to handle high moisture hay and deliver consistent bale weight and density regardless of varying moisture conditions. CASE IH balers keep moisture in for better quality hay. Higher hay quality means more profits.

Less Leaf Loss

CASE IH big square balers are center-line balers and have an extra wide pick-up for increased capacity with less leaf loss. And a charge chamber preforms bale flakes for better leaf retention to ensure higher hay quality.

Hoober's Super Service

ADVANCED MACHINERY SERVICE BY HOOBER

Hoober, Inc. has the experienced service mechanics who will keep your big square baler running strong. Hoober service people know balers and we know when your baler's down it's money out of your pocket. That's why Hoober, Inc. has the largest inventory of in-stock parts backed by the knowledgeable Hoober service team. And we'll come to you, delivering superior in-field service that will get you back to baling hay faster. Nobody knows big square balers like Hoober, Inc.
